CHARLES KNIGHT'S POPULAR HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

Publishing Monthly, in One-Shilling Numbers.

THE
POPULAR HISTORY OF ENGLAND,
BY CHARLES KNIGHT.

THE First Portion of this important work, from the Earliest Times to the Revolution of 1688 (with a copious Index), and forming a complete work, is published in Four Volumes, price 36s., illustrated by 32 Steel Engravings and numerous Woodcuts.

In a Postscript to the Fourth Volume, which concludes this Period, the author says,— “It is now almost the invariable custom in all competitions of students, to divide their examinations in English History into two great eras—the period before the Revolution, and the more modern period. For the period to 1689, either Hume’s or Lingard’s Histories have been generally chosen as the works to be studied. I may venture to affirm that, in our immediate day, the growth of a sounder public opinion repudiates such a choice of either of these books, in some respects so valuable. The political prejudices of Hume,—the ecclesiastical convictions of Lingard,—render them very unsafe guides in the formation of the principles of the youth of this kingdom. Without pretending that I have supplied the want, I trust that I have made some approaches to such a result, by an earnest desire to present a true picture of past events and opinions, as far as I could realise them.”

For the reason thus stated, the narrative of public events, and all the subsidiary details of this FIRST DIVISION of the POPULAR HISTORY are treated as forming a SEPARATE AND COMPLETE WORK; with which view a COPIOUS INDEX is added to the Four Volumes.

The SECOND DIVISION will come down to that period of the reign of her present Majesty which has become a constitutional epoch in the important change of the commercial policy of the country.

LORD BROUGHAM.

“THE POPULAR HISTORY OF ENGLAND OF CHARLES KNIGHT is of a somewhat higher price (comparing it with works issuing in penny numbers); but the plates, as well as the paper, are greatly superior, and its literary merits are of a very high order. Indeed, nothing has ever appeared superior, if anything has been published equal to the account of the state of commerce, government, and society at different periods.”—Address on Popular Literature, at the Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, October 12, 1858.

TIMES.

“Thus, by hearty enthusiasm, yet without a particle of bombast; in short, by his genuine sympathy with all of English kind, he (the author) succeeds in arousing the patriot, while he disarms the critic; and we predict that the reception of his book will fully justify its title. His attempt to supply the place of Hume’s History is in a great measure successful, at least we know to which we ourselves shall henceforth turn to by preference.”

WESTMINSTER REVIEW.

“Mr. Knight’s Book well deserves its name; it will be emphatically popular, and it will gain its popularity by genuine merit. It is as good a book of the kind as ever was written. * * * * ‘The Popular History of England’ has reached its fourth volume. * * * This extension of the province of history to manners and common life, and all that indicates the condition of the people, is far from new, but it has never been executed with anything like the happy ease with which it is here attempted, not overlaying the public annals, but interpenetrating them. The author apologises for having outgrown the limits originally proposed. This apology will be very readily accepted by his readers, for no one can think that there is a word too much.”

SPECTATOR.

“As an immense store-house—some two thousand pages of facts bearing upon the history, religion, literature, arts, manners, and life of England from the Romans to the Revolution of 1688, KNIGHT’s POPULAR HISTORY OF ENGLAND is beyond all question a very remarkable work. Not the least remarkable feature in it perhaps is the freshness of feeling and the catholicity of mind which still inspires a man, whom many yet associate with nothing else than the utilitarianism of the ‘Useful Knowledge Society.’”

ATHENÆUM.

“Meantime, we very cordially recommend Mr. Knight’s volumes to the readers whom they seek. We know of no history of England so free from prejudice, so thoroughly honest and impartial, so stored with facts, fancies, and illustrations,—and therefore none so well adapted for school or college as this ‘Popular History of England.’”

THE ENGLISH CYCLOPÆDIA.

(Fourth Division.)

ARTS AND SCIENCES.

THREE of the Four Divisions of this important work having been completed, and the publication of the FOURTH DIVISION having commenced, the Proprietors desire to call attention to the character of the Cyclopædia, as a complete body of knowledge.

As separate works, the nature of the Cyclopædia of GEOGRAPHY, of BIOGRAPHY, of NATURAL HISTORY, and of ARTS AND SCIENCES, is sufficiently clear. But, taken as a whole, the connection of these great Divisions may require some very brief elucidation.

If the English Cyclopædia had been arranged in two Alphabets instead of in four, the one department might have been called Literary, the other Scientific.

The Cyclopædia of GEOGRAPHY, and the Cyclopædia of BIOGRAPHY, forming Ten Volumes, embrace together not only the Description of every Country, but its History in all ages. Under the Geographical name will be found a rapid view of a nation's progress. Under the Biographical names will be found all the great public events, and the religious, moral, and intellectual history of every State, as detailed in the lives of its eminent citizens.

The Cyclopædia of NATURAL HISTORY, and the Cyclopædia of ARTS AND SCIENCES, now in course of publication, and forming also Ten Volumes, present every feature of the Physical and Moral Sciences, and of the applications of Science to Productive Industry. This concluding Division also embraces all branches of miscellaneous information not strictly referable to these general heads.

The English Cyclopædia is founded upon the valuable Copyright of the Penny Cyclopædia, which has always remained in the hands of MR. KNIGHT. Every article in that celebrated work was an original contribution, furnished by many of the most eminent men of the time. The elaborate revisions, with the large additions, of the present work, have involved a new outlay for literary labour of not less than Seven Thousand Pounds, making the cost of literary production alone of these Twenty Volumes, not far short of Fifty Thousand Pounds.

Three-fourths of the Cyclopædia being now completed, no doubt can arise as to the certainty of the remaining fourth being regularly carried to a conclusion. The last Division commenced in the periodical course of publication, on the 31st of January, 1859, and will be finished in the last month of 1860.

THE ENGLISH CYCLOPÆDIA.

(In Four Divisions.)

CONDUCTED BY CHARLES KNIGHT.

THE FOLLOWING DIVISIONS ARE COMPLETED:—

THE ENGLISH CYCLOPÆDIA OF BIOGRAPHY.

Six Volumes, Price £3; or, in Three Volumes, half-bound morocco, £3 12s.

This Cyclopædia of Biography may, without presumption, be stated to be the most complete Biographical Dictionary extant; unequalled in any language for the universality of its range, its fulness without verbosity, its accuracy, and its completeness to the present time. It possesses the new and important feature of giving notices of living persons, English and foreign, of contemporary celebrity. These notices, and of eminent persons recently deceased, constitute a fourth of the whole work. The Six Volumes contain as much matter as Forty Octavo Volumes, such as those of the "Biographie Universelle;" they exceed in quantity the Thirty-two Volumes of Chalmers' "Biographical Dictionary," and Four of these Volumes are equal in extent to the Twelve Volumes of Rose's "Biographical Dictionary." No work of a similar nature approaches the English Cyclopædia of Biography in cheapness.

THE ENGLISH CYCLOPÆDIA OF GEOGRAPHY.

Four Volumes, price £2 2s.; or, in Two Volumes, half-bound morocco, £2 10s.

In this Cyclopædia, which embraces the physical features of every country, and the statistics of its departments, its cities and marts of commerce, as well as recording its history to the most recent period, the greatest care has been bestowed to give completeness to the valuable articles upon which this new work is founded. That care has not been confined to revision and correction. Many new articles have been introduced, and many of the old ones supplied by others wholly re-written. The fulness and accuracy of the information, thus furnished, render the Cyclopædia of Geography a necessary manual for every library and news-room; not presenting a dry catalogue of names of places, but furnishing notices of general interest, and embracing whatever is new and important in Geographical Science.

"By common consent this 'CYCLOPÆDIA OF GEOGRAPHY' seems to be an excellent work. It took its rise in the 'Penny Cyclopædia,' where the department of Geography was particularly well managed. All later discoveries, and the multitude of facts of all magnitudes revealed by our recent wars, and recorded by the penmen of the camp and the ship, have been carefully incorporated with the work, and make it the richest we have."—Westminster Review, October, 1858.

THE ENGLISH CYCLOPÆDIA OF NATURAL HISTORY.

Four Volumes, Price £2 2s.; or, in Two Volumes, half-bound morocco, £2 10s.

This department of the Cyclopædia includes the contributions of the most eminent English naturalists. In BOTANY, those of Dr. Lankester, Dr. Lindley, and Dr. Royle; in GEOLOGY, those of Sir Henry de la Beche, Mr. Horner, and Professor Phillips; in MINERALOGY, those of Mr. R. Phillips and Professor W. Turner; in ZOOLOGY, those of Mr. Broderip, Professor Forbes, Mr. Ogilby, and Mr. Waterhouse; in COMPARATIVE ANATOMY and PHYSIOLOGY, those of Mr. Day, Professor Paget, and Dr. Southwood Smith. To the general reader, this Cyclopædia, embracing the most interesting details of natural History, presented in the most attractive form of scientific explanation, and illustrated with many hundred of beautiful wood-engravings, will furnish a most desirable addition to his library. To the medical student the work is indispensable.

The following has just been added to

IMPORTANT

ANNOUNCEMENT.

METALLIC PEN MAKER TO THE QUEEN, BY ROYAL COMMAND. JOSEPH GILLOTT

BEGS most respectfully to inform the Commercial World, Scholastic Institutions, and the Public generally that, by a novel application of his unrivalled Machinery for making Steel Pens, and, in accordance with the scientific spirit of the times, he has introduced a NEW SERIES of his useful productions, which, for EXCELLENCE OF TEMPER, QUALITY OF MATERIAL, and, above all, CHEAPNESS IN PRICE, he believes will ensure universal approbation, and defy competition.

Each Pen bears the impress of his name as a guarantee of quality; and they are put up in the usual style of boxes, containing one gross each, with label outside, and the fac-simile of his signature.

At the request of persons extensively engaged in tuition, J. G. has introduced his which are especially adapted to their use, being of different degrees of flexibility, and with fine, medium, and broad points, suitable for the various kinds of Writing taught in Schools.

Sold Retail by all Stationers, Booksellers, and other respectable Dealers in Steel Pens.—Merchants and wholesale Dealers can be supplied at the Works, Graham Street; 96, New Street, Birmingham;

No. 91, JOHN STREET, NEW YORK; and at 37, GRACECHURCH STREET, LONDON.

Important to every man who keeps

THORLEY'S FOOD FOR CATTLE,
77, NEWGATE STREET, LONDON.

Beware of spurious imitations.

CURE OF ASTHMATIC COUGH BY

From James Sutcliffe, Farmer, Water Meeting. "I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of Dr. Locock's Wafers, from the use of which I have derived very great benefit, and have no hesitation in saying that as a remedy for Asthma and difficulty in breathing they are unequalled.—Signed, J. SUTCLIFFE." To Mr. Evans, Chemist, Barrowford.

Dr. Locock's PULMONIC WAFERS give instant relief, and a rapid cure of Asthma, Consumption, Coughs, and all disorders of the Breath and Lungs.

To SINGERS and PUBLIC SPEAKERS they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice. They have a pleasant taste. Price 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 3s. per box. Sold by all Druggists.

CAUTION.—Every box of the GENUINE medicine has the words "DR. LOCOCK'S WAFERS" in WHITE LETTERS ON A RED GROUND in the Government Stamp, and without which words ALL ARE COUNTERFEITS AND AN IMPOSITION.

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

THIS preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind: for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the Gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimoniums from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age.

These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors. See the name of "THOMAS PROUT, 229, Strand, London," on the Government Stamp.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

IS PRODUCED BY

GOWLAND'S LOTION.

LADIES exposed to the weather at this variable season, will, immediately on the application of this celebrated Preparation (established 101 years), experience its extraordinary genial qualities. It produces and sustains removes freckles, tan, redness, and pimples, and promotes healthy action, softness, and elasticity of the skin, and is recommended in preference to any other preparation by the Medical Profession.

GREAT PURITY AND DELICACY OF COMPLEXION,

Sold by all Druggists and Perfumers. Half-pints, 2s. 9d.

CAUTION.—Observe the name of the Proprietor, E. C. BOURNE, 19, Lamb's Conduit-street, engraved on the Government Stamp.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL ARTICLE EVER KNOWN IN THE GROWTH AND IMPROVEMENT OF THE HUMAN HAIR, IS ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL,

proved beyond question by its results for MORE than HALF A CENTURY past, and when other specifics have failed.

It prevents hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak HAIR, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandriff, and makes it BEAUTIFULLY SOFT, PLIABLE, and GLOSSY.

For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR.

Its invaluable properties have obtained the Patronage of Royalty, the Nobility, and the Aristocracy throughout Europe; while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the high esteem in which it is universally held, with numerous Testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.

Price 3s. 6d. and 7s. ; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d. ; and double that size, 21s.

WHITE AND SOUND TEETH

Are indispensable to PERSONAL ATTRACTION, and to Health and Longevity, by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

Or PEARL DENTIFRICE,

Compounded of ORIENTAL INGREDIENTS, is of inestimable value in IMPROVING AND BEAUTIFYING THE TEETH, STRENGTHENING THE GUMS,

And in Rendering the Breath Sweet and Pure.

It eradicates Tartar from the Teeth, removes spots of incipient decay, and polishes and preserves the enamel, to which it imparts

A PEARL-LIKE WHITENESS.

As the most efficient and fragrant aromatic purifier of the Breath, Teeth, and Gums ever known, ROWLANDS' ODONTO has, for a long series of years, occupied a distinguished place at the Toilets of the Sovereigns and the Nobility throughout Europe; while the general demand for it at once announces the favour in which it is universally held.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

* * * SOLD BY A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, HATTON GARDEN, LONDON, AND BY CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS.

BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!!

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

A SAFE AND CERTAIN REMEDY FOR COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, and other Affections of the Throat and Chest. In INCIPENT CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, and WINTER COUGH, they are uns fail ing. Being free from every hurtful ingredient, they may be taken by the most delicate female or the youngest child; while the PUBLIC SPEAKER and PROFESSIONAL SINGER will find them invaluable in allaying the hoarseness and irritation incidental to vocal exertion, and also a powerful auxiliary in the production of MELODIOUS ENUNCIATION.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONIAL TO THE EFFICACY, OF KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES IN RELIEVING PULMONARY AFFECTIONS.

Sir.—The very excellent properties of your Lozenges induce me to trouble you with another Testimonial on their behalf. All I can say is, that I have been more or less Consumptive for upwards of three years, and have tried a great number of lozenges to abate the Cough, but from none have I found such relief as from yours— even one of them will check the most violent attack. They are invaluable, and I strongly recommend them to persons suffering from a Cough or Cold on the Chest. Pray make any use of them you please if worth your while.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Dawlish, Jan. 14, 1858.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL FROM A LADY.

25, Bouverie Street, London, March 31, 1858.

Sir.—I feel much pleasure in informing you of the great benefit I have received from your valuable Cough Lozenges. I have been in the habit of taking them when required, for some years, and can therefore speak confidently as to their efficacy, in my own case, never having found any other remedy for a cough of equal service.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

F. NELSON.

BON JOUR MON AMI.

CHAPTER XIII.

IN WHICH THE PRINCE MARCHES UP THE HILL AND DOWN AGAIN.

E understand the respectful indignation of all loyal Britons when they come to read of Mr. George Warrington's conduct towards a gallant and gracious Prince, the beloved son of the best of monarchs, and the Captain-General of the British army. What an inestimable favour has not the young man slighted! What a chance of promotion had he not thrown away! Will Esmond, whose language was always rich in blasphemies, employed his very strongest curses in speaking of his cousin's behaviour, and expressed his delight that the confounded young Mohock was cutting his own throat. Cousin Castlewood said that a savage gentleman had a right to scalp himself if he liked: or perhaps, he added charitably, our cousin Mr. Warrington heard enough of the war-whoop in Braddock's affair, and has no more stomach for fighting. Mr. Will rejoiced that the younger brother had gone to the deuce, and he rejoiced to think that the elder was following him. The first time he met the fellow, Will said, he should take care to let Mr. George know what he thought of him.

"If you intend to insult George, at least you had best take care that his brother Harry is out of hearing!" cried Lady Maria—on which we may fancy more curses uttered by Mr. Will, with regard to his twin kinsfolk.

"Ta, ta, ta!" says my lord. "No more of this squabbling! We can't be all warriors in the family!"

"I never heard your lordship laid claim to be one!" says Maria.

"Never, my dear; quite the contrary! Will is our champion, and one is quite enough in the house. So I dare say with the two Mohocks;—George is the student, and Harry is the fighting man. When you intended to quarrel, Will, what a pity it was you had not George, instead of t'other, to your hand!"

"Your lordship's hand is famous—at picquet," says Will's mother.

"It is a pretty one!" says my lord, surveying his fingers, with a simper. "My Lord Hervey's glove and mine were of a size. Yes, my hand, as you say, is more fitted for cards than for war. Yours, my Lady Castlewood, is pretty dexterous, too. How I bless the day when you bestowed it on my lamented father!" In this play of sarcasm, as in some other games of skill, his lordship was not sorry to engage, having a cool head, and being able to beat his family all round.

Madame de Bernstein, when she heard of Mr. Warrington's bévue, was exceedingly angry, stormed, and scolded her immediate household; and would have scolded George, but she was growing old, and had not the courage of her early days. Moreover, she was a little afraid of her nephew, and respectful in her behaviour to him. "You will never make your fortune at Court, nephew!" she groaned, when, soon after his discomfiture, the young gentleman went to wait upon her.

"It was never my wish, madam!" said Mr. George, in a very stately manner.

"Your wish was to help Harry? You might hereafter have been of service to your brother, had you accepted the Duke's offer. Princes do not love to have their favours refused, and I don't wonder that his Royal Highness was offended."

"General Lambert said the same thing," George confessed, turning rather red; "and I see now that I was wrong. But you must please remember that I had never seen a Court before, and I suppose I am scarce likely to shine in one."

"I think possibly not, my good nephew," says the aunt, taking snuff.

"And what then?" asked George. "I never had ambition for that kind of glory, and can make myself quite easy without it. When his Royal Highness spoke to me—most kindly, as I own—my thought was, I shall make a very bad soldier, and my brother would be a very good one. He has a hundred good qualities for the profession, in which I am deficient; and would have served a Commanding Officer far better than I ever could. Say the Duke is in battle, and his horse is shot, as my poor chief's was at home, would he not be better for a beast that had courage and strength to bear him anywhere, than with one that could not carry his weight?"

"Au fait. His Royal Highness's charger must be a strong one, my dear!" says the old lady.

"Expende Hannibalem," mutters George, with a shrug. "Our Hannibal weighs no trifle."

"I don't quite follow you, sir, and your Hannibal," the Baroness remarks.

"When Mr. Wolfe and Mr. Lambert remonstrated with me as you have done, madam," George rejoins, with a laugh, "I made this same defence which I am making to you. I said I offered to the Prince the best soldier in the family, and the two gentlemen allowed that my blunder at least had some excuse. Who knows but that they may set me right with his Royal Highness? The taste I have had of battles has shown me how little my genius inclines that way. We saw the Scotch play which everybody is talking about 't'other night. And when the hero, young Norval, said how he longed to follow to the field some warlike lord, I thought to myself, 'how like my Harry is to him, except that he doth not brag.' Harry is pining now for a red coat, and if we don't mind, will take the shilling. He has the map of Germany for ever under his eyes, and follows the King of Prussia everywhere. He is not afraid of men or gods. As for me, I love my books and quiet best, and to read about battles in Homer or Lucan."

"Then what made a soldier of you at all, my dear? And why did you not send Harry with Mr. Braddock, instead of going yourself?" asked Madame de Bernstein.

"My mother loved her younger son the best," said George, darkly. "Besides, with the enemy invading our country, it was my duty, as the head of our family, to go on the campaign. Had I been a Scotchman twelve years ago, I should have been a—"

"Hush, sir! or I shall be more angry than ever!" said the old lady, with a perfectly pleased face.

George's explanation might thus appease Madame de Bernstein, an old woman whose principles we fear were but loose: but to the loyal heart of Sir Miles Warrington and his lady, the young man's conduct gave a severe blow indeed! "I should have thought," her ladyship said, "from my sister Esmond Warrington's letter, that my brother's widow was a woman of good sense and judgment, and that she had educated her sons in a becoming manner. But what, Sir Miles, what my dear Thomas Claypool, can we think of an education which has resulted so lamentably for both these young men?"

"The elder seems to know a power of Latin, though, and speaks the French and the German too. I heard him with the Hanover Envoy, at the Baroness's rout," says Mr. Claypool. "The French he jabbered quite easy: and when he was at a loss for the High Dutch, he and the envoy began in Latin, and talked away till all the room stared."

"It is not language, but principles, Thomas Claypool!" exclaims the virtuous matron. "What must Mr. Warrington's principles be, when he could reject an offer made him by his Prince? Can he speak the High Dutch? So much the more ought he to have accepted his Royal Highness's condescension, and made himself useful in the campaign! Look at our son, look at Miles!"

"Hold up thy head, Miley, my boy!" says Papa.

"I trust, Sir Miles, that as a member of the House of Commons, as an English gentleman, you will attend his Royal Highness's levee to-morrow, and say, if such an offer had been made to us for that child, we would have taken it, though our boy is but ten years of age."

" Faith, Miley, thou wouldst make a good little drummer or fifer!" says Papa. " Shouldst like to be a little soldier, Miley?"

" Anything, sir, anything! a Warrington ought to be ready at any moment to have himself cut in pieces for his sovereign!" cries the matron, pointing to the boy; who, as soon as he comprehended his mother's proposal, protested against it by a loud roar, in the midst of which he was removed by Screwby. In obedience to the conjugal orders, Sir Miles went to his Royal Highness's levee the next day, and made a protest of his love and duty, which the Prince deigned to accept, saying:

" Nobody ever supposed that Sir Miles Warrington would ever refuse any place offered to him."

A compliment gracious indeed, and repeated everywhere by Lady Warrington, as showing how implicitly the august family on the throne could rely on the loyalty of the Warringtons.

Accordingly, when this worthy couple saw George, they received him with a ghastly commiseration, such as our dear relatives or friends will sometimes extend to us when we have done something fatal or clumsy in life; when we have come badly out of our lawsuit; when we enter the room just as the company has been abusing us; when our banker has broke; or we for our sad part have had to figure in the commercial columns of the London Gazette;—when, in a word, we are guilty of some notorious fault, or blunder, or misfortune. Who does not know that face of pity? Whose dear relations have not so deplored him, not dead, but living? Not yours? Then, sir, if you have never been in scrapes; if you have never sowed a handful of wild oats or two; if you have always been fortunate, and good, and careful, and butter has never melted in your mouth, and an imprudent word has never come out of it; if you have never sinned and repented, and been a fool and been sorry—then, sir, you are a wiseacre who won't waste your time over an idle novel, and it is not de te that the fable is narrated at all.

Not that it was just on Sir Miles's part to turn upon George, and be angry with his nephew for refusing the offer of promotion made by his Royal Highness, for Sir Miles himself had agreed in George's view of pursuing quite other than a military career, and it was in respect to this plan of her son's that Madam Esmond had written from Virginia to Sir Miles Warrington. George had announced to her his intention of entering at the Temple, and qualifying himself for the magisterial and civil duties which, in the course of nature, he would be called to fulfil; nor could any one applaud his resolution more cordially than his uncle Sir Miles, who introduced George to a lawyer of reputation, under whose guidance we may fancy the young gentleman reading leisurely. Madam Esmond from home signified her approval of her son's course, fully agreeing with Sir Miles (to whom and his lady she begged to send her grateful remembrances) that the British Constitution was the envy of the world, and the proper object of every English gentleman's admiring study. The chief point to which George's mother objected was the notion that Mr. Warrington should have to sit down in the Temple dinner-hall, and cut at a shoulder of mutton, and drink small-beer out of tin pannikins, by the side of rough students who wore gowns like the parish-clerk. George's loyal younger brother shared too this repugnance. Anything was good enough for him, Harry said; he was a younger son, and prepared to rough it; but George, in a gown, and dining in a mess with three nobody's sons off dirty pewter platters! Harry never could relish this condescension on his brother's part, or fancy George in his proper place at any except the high table; and was sorry that a plan Madam Esmond hinted at in her letters was not feasible—viz., that an application should be made to the Master of the Temple, who should be informed that Mr. George Warrington was a gentleman of most noble birth, and of great property in America, and ought only to sit with the very best company in the Hall. Rather to Harry's discomfiture, when he communicated his own and his mother's ideas to the gentlemen's new coffee-house friend Mr. Spencer, Mr. Spencer received the proposal with roars of laughter; and I cannot learn, from the Warrington papers, that any application was made to the Master of the Temple on this subject. Besides his literary and historical pursuits, which were those he most especially loved, Mr. Warrington studied the laws of his country, attended the courts at Westminster, where he heard a Henley, a Pratt, a Murray, and those other great famous schools of eloquence and patriotism, the two houses of parliament.

Gradually Mr. Warrington made acquaintance with some of the members of the House and the Bar; who, when they came to know him, spoke of him as a young gentleman of good parts and good breeding, and in terms so generally complimentary, that his good uncle's heart relented towards him, and Dora and Flora began once more to smile upon him. This reconciliation dated from the time when his Royal Highness the Duke, after having been defeated by the French, in the affair of Hastenbeck, concluded the famous capitulation with the French, which his Majesty George II. refused to ratify. His Royal Highness, as 'tis well known, flung up his commissions after this disgrace, laid down his commander's baton—which, it must be confessed, he had not wielded with much luck or dexterity—and never again appeared at the head of armies or in public life. The stout warrior would not allow a word of complaint against his father and sovereign to escape his lips; but, as he retired with his wounded honour, and as he would have no interest or authority more, nor any places to give, it may be supposed that Sir Miles Warrington's anger against his nephew diminished as his respect for his Royal Highness diminished.

As our two gentlemen were walking in St. James's Park, one day, with their friend Mr. Lambert, they met his Royal Highness in plain clothes and without a star, and made profound bows to the Prince, who was pleased to stop and speak to them.

He asked Mr. Lambert how he liked my Lord Ligonier, his new chief at the Horse Guards, and the new duties there in which he was engaged? And, recognising the young men, with that fidelity of memory for which his Royal race hath ever been remarkable, he said to Mr. Warrington :

“ You did well, sir, not to come with me when I asked you in the spring.”

“ I was sorry, then, sir,” Mr. Warrington said, making a very low reverence, “ but I am more sorry now.”

On which the Prince said, “ Thank you, sir,” and, touching his hat, walked away. And the circumstances of this interview, and the discourse which passed at it, being related to Mrs. Esmond Warrington in a letter from her younger son, created so deep an impression in that lady’s mind, that she narrated the anecdote many hundreds of times until all her friends and acquaintances knew and, perhaps, were tired of it.

Our gentlemen went through the Park, and so towards the Strand, where they had business. And Mr. Lambert, pointing to the lion on the top of the Earl of Northumberland’s house at Charing Cross, says :—

“ Harry Warrington ! your brother is like yonder lion.”

“ Because he is as brave as one,” says Harry.

“ Because I respect virgins ! ” says George, laughing.

“ Because you are a stupid lion. Because you turn your back on the East, and absolutely salute the setting sun. Why, child, what earthly good can you get by being civil to a man in hopeless dungeon and disgrace ? Your uncle will be more angry with you than ever—and so am I, sir.” But Mr. Lambert was always laughing in his waggish way, and, indeed, he did not look the least angry.

CHAPTER XIV.

ARMA VIRUMQUE.

NDEED, if Harry Warrington had a passion for military pursuits and studies, there was enough of war stirring in Europe, and enough talk in all societies which he frequented in London, to excite and inflame him. Though our own gracious Prince of the house of Hanover had been beaten, the Protestant Hero, the King of Prussia, was filling the world with his glory, and winning those astonishing victories in which I deem it fortunate on my own account that my poor Harry took no part; for then his veracious biographer would have had to narrate battles the description whereof has been undertaken by another pen. I am glad, I say, that Harry Warrington was not at Rossbach on that famous Gunpowder Fête-day, on the 5th of November, in the year 1757; nor at that tremendous slaughtering-match of Leuthen, which the Prussian king played a month afterwards; for these prodigious actions will presently be narrated in other volumes, which I and all the world are eager to behold. Would you have this history compete with yonder book? Could my jaunty, yellow park-phaeton run counter to that grim chariot of thundering war? Could my meek little jog-trot Pegasus meet the shock of yon steed of foaming bit and flaming nostril? Dear, kind reader (with whom I love to talk from time to time, stepping down from the stage where our figures are performing, attired in the habits and using the parlance of past ages),—my kind, patient reader! it is a mercy for both of us that Harry Warrington did not follow the King of the Borussians, as he was minded to do, for then I should have had to describe battles which Carlyle is going to paint ; and I don't wish you should make odious comparisons between me and that master.

Harry Warrington not only did not join the King of the Borussians, but he pined and chafed at not going. He led a sulky useless life, that is the fact. He dangled about the military coffee-houses. He did not care for reading anything save a newspaper. His turn was not literary. He even thought novels were stupid ; and, as for the ladies crying their eyes out over Mr. Richardson, he could not imagine how they could be moved by any such nonsense. He used to laugh in a very hearty jolly way, but a little late, and some time after the joke was over. Pray, why should all gentlemen have a literary turn ? And do we like some of our friends the worse because they never turned a couplet in their lives ? Ruined, perforce idle, dependent on his brother for supplies, if he read a book falling asleep over it, with no fitting work for his great strong hands to do—how lucky it is that he did not get into more trouble. Why, in the case of Achilles himself, when he was sent by his mamma to the court of King What'd'ye call'em in order to be put out of harm's reach, what happened to him amongst a parcel of women with whom he was made to idle his life away ? And how did Pyrrhus come into the world ? A powerful mettlesome young Achilles ought not to be leading-stringed by women too much ; is out of his place dawdling by distaffs or handing coffee-cups ; and when he is not fighting, depend on it, is likely to fall into much worse mischief.

Those soft-hearted women, the two elder ladies of the Lambert family, with whom he mainly consorted, had an untiring pity and kindness for Harry, such as women only—and only a few of those—can give. If a man is in grief, who cheers him ; in trouble, who consoles him ; in wrath, who soothes him ; in joy, who makes him doubly happy ; in prosperity, who rejoices ; in disgrace, who backs him against the world, and dresses with gentle unguents and warm poultices the ranking wounds made by the stings and arrows of outrageous Fortune ? Who but woman, if you please ? You who are ill and sore from the buffets of Fate, have you one or two of these sweet physicians ? Return thanks to the gods that they have left you so much of consolation. What gentleman is not more or less a Prometheus ? Who has not his rock (ai, ai), his chain (ea, ea), and his liver in a deuce of a condition ? But the sea-nymphs come—the gentle, the sympathising ; they kiss our writhing feet ; they moisten our parched lips with their tears ; they do their blessed best to console us Titans ; they don't turn their backs upon us after our overthrow.

Now Theo and her mother were full of pity for Harry ; but Hetty's heart was rather hard and seemingly savage towards him. She chafed that his position was not more glorious ; she was angry that he was still dependent and idle. The whole world was in arms, and could he not carry a musket ? It was harvest time, and hundreds of thousands of reapers were out with their flashing sickles ; could he not use his, and cut down his sheaf or two of glory ?

"Why, how savage the little thing is with him!" says Papa, after a scene in which, according to her word, Miss Hetty had been firing little shots into that quivering target which came and set itself up in Mrs. Lambert's drawing-room every day.

"Her conduct is perfectly abominable!" cries Mamma; "she deserves to be whipped, and sent to bed."

"Perhaps, Mother, it is because she likes him better than any of us do," says Theo, "and it is for his sake that Hetty is angry. If I were fond of—of some one, I should like to be able to admire and respect him always—to think everything he did right—and my gentleman better than all the gentlemen in the world!"

"The truth is, my dear," answers Mrs. Lambert, "that your father is so much better than all the world, he has spoiled us. Did you ever see any one to compare with him?"

"Very few, indeed," owns Theo, with a blush.

"Very few. Who is so good tempered?"

"I think nobody, Mamma," Theo acknowledges.

"Or so brave?"

"Why, I daresay Mr. Wolfe, or Harry, or Mr. George, are very brave."

"Or so learned and witty?"

"I am sure Mr. George seems very learned, and witty too, in his way," says Theo; "and his manners are very fine—you own they are. Madame de Bernstein says they are, and she hath seen the world. Indeed, Mr. George has a lofty way with him, which I don't see in other people; and, in reading books, I find he chooses the fine noble things always, and loves them in spite of all his satire. He certainly is of a satirical turn, but then he is only bitter against mean things and people. No gentleman hath a more tender heart I am sure; and but yesterday, after he had been talking so bitterly as you said, I happened to look out of window, and saw him stop and treat a whole crowd of little children to apples at the stall at the corner. And the day before yesterday, when he was coming and brought me the Molière, he stopped and gave money to a beggar, and how charmingly, sure, he reads the French! I agree with him though about Tartuffe, though 'tis so wonderfully clever and lively, that a mere villain and hypocrite is a figure too mean to be made the chief of a great piece. Iago, Mr. George said, is near as great a villain; but then he is not the first character of the tragedy, which is Othello, with his noble weakness. But what fine ladies and gentlemen Molière represents—so Mr. George thinks—and—but O, I don't dare to repeat the verses after him."

"But you know them by heart, my dear?" asks Mrs. Lambert.

And Theo replies, "O yes, Mamma! I know them by Nonsense!"

I here fancy osculations, palpitations, and exit Miss Theo, blushing like a rose. Why had she stopped in her sentence? Because Mamma was looking at her so oddly. And why was Mamma looking at her so oddly? And why had she looked after Mr. George, when he was going away, and looked for him when he was coming? Ah, and why do cheeks blush, and why do roses bloom? Old Time is still a-flying. Old spring and bud time; old summer and bloom time; old autumn and seed time; old winter-time, when the cracking, shivering old tree-tops are bald or covered with snow.

A few minutes after George arrived, Theo would come down stairs with a fluttering heart, may be, and a sweet nosegay in her cheeks, just culled, as it were, fresh in his honour; and I suppose she must have been constantly at that window which commanded the street, and whence she could espy his generosity to the sweep, or his purchases from the apple-woman. But if it was Harry who knocked, she remained in her own apartment with her work or her books, sending her sister to receive the young gentleman, or her brothers when the elder was at home from college, or Doctor Crusius from the Chartreux gave the younger leave to go home. And what good eyes Theo must have had—and often in the evening, too—to note the difference between Harry's yellow hair and George's dark locks,—and between their figures, though they were so like that people continually were mistaking one for the other brother. Now it is certain that Theo never mistook one or t'other; and that Hetty, for her part, was not in the least excited, or rude, or pert, when she found the black-haired gentleman in her mother's drawing-room.

Our friends could come when they liked to Mr. Lambert's house, and stay as long as they chose; and, one day, he of the golden locks was sitting on a couch there, in an attitude of more than ordinary idleness and despondency, when who should come down to him but Miss Hetty? I say it was a most curious thing (though the girls would have gone to the rack rather than own any collusion), that when Harry called, Hetty appeared; when George arrived, Theo somehow came; and so, according to the usual dispensation, it was Miss Lambert, junior, who now arrived to entertain the younger Virginian.

After usual ceremonies and compliments we may imagine that the lady says to the gentleman:

“And pray, sir, what makes your honour look so glum this morning?”

“Ah, Hetty!” says he. “I have nothing else to do but to look glum. I remember when we were boys—and I a rare idle one, you may be sure—I would always be asking my tutor for a holiday, which I would pass very likely swinging on a gate, or making ducks and drakes over the pond, and those do-nothing days were always the most melancholy. What have I got to do now from morning till night?”

“Breakfast, walk—dinner, walk—tea, supper, I suppose; and a pipe of your Virginia,” says Miss Hetty, tossing her head.

“I tell you what, when I went back with Charley to the Chartreux, t'other night, I had a mind to say to the master, ‘Teach me, sir. Here's a boy knows a deal more Latin and Greek, at thirteen, than I do, who am ten years older. I have nothing to do from morning till night, and I might as well go to my books again, and see if I can repair my idleness as a boy.' Why do you laugh, Hetty ? "

" I laugh to fancy you at the head of a class, and called up by the master ! " cries Hetty.

" I shouldn't be at the head of the class," Harry says, humbly. " George might be at the head of any class, but I am not a book-man, you see ; and when I was young neglected myself, and was very idle. We would not let our tutors cane us much at home, but, if we had, it might have done me good."

Hetty drubbed with her little foot, and looked at the young man sitting before her,—strong, idle, melancholy.

" Upon my word, it might do you good now ! " she was minded to say. " What does Tom say about the caning at school ? Does his account of it set you longing for it, pray ? " she asked.

" His account of his school," Harry answered simply, " makes me see that I have been idle when I ought to have worked, and that I have not a genius for books, and for what am I good ? Only to spend my patrimony when I come abroad, or to lounge at coffee-houses or race-courses, or to gallop behind dogs when I am at home. I am good for nothing, I am."

" What, such a great, brave, strong fellow as you good for nothing ? " cries Het. " I would not confess as much to any woman, if I were twice as good for nothing ! "

" What am I to do ? I ask for leave to go into the army, and Madam Esmond does not answer me. 'Tis the only thing I am fit for. I have no money to buy. Having spent all my own, and so much of my brother's, I cannot and won't ask for more. If my mother would but send me to the army, you know I would jump to go."

" Eh ! A gentleman of spirit does not want a woman to buckle his sword on for him or to clean his firelock ! What was that our Papa told us of the young gentleman at court yesterday ?—Sir John Armytage——"

" Sir John Armytage ? I used to know him when I frequented White's and the club-houses—a fine, noble young gentleman, of a great estate in the North."

" And engaged to be married to a famous beauty, too—Miss Howe, my Lord Howe's sister—but that, I suppose, is not an obstacle to gentlemen ? "

" An obstacle to what ? " asks the gentleman.

" An obstacle to glory ! " says Miss Hetty. " I think no woman of spirit would say 'Stay ! ' though she adored her lover ever so much, when his country said 'Go ! ' Sir John had volunteered for the expedition which is preparing, and being at court yesterday his Majesty asked him when he would be ready to go ? ' To-morrow, please your Majesty,' replies Sir John, and the king said, that was a soldier's answer. My father himself is longing to go, though he has Mamma and all us brats at home. O dear, O dear! Why wasn't I a man myself? Both my brothers are for the Church; but, as for me, I know I should have made a famous little soldier!" And, so speaking, this young person strode about the room, wearing a most courageous military aspect, and looking as bold as Joan of Arc.

Harry beheld her with a tender admiration. "I think," says he, "I would hardly like to see a musket on that little shoulder, nor a wound on that pretty face, Hetty."

"Wounds! who fears wounds?" cries the little maid. "Muskets? If I could carry one, I would use it. You men fancy that we women are good for nothing but to make puddings or stitch samplers. Why wasn't I a man, I say. George was reading to us yesterday out of Tasso—look, here it is, and I thought the verses applied to me. See! Here is the book, with the mark in it where we left off."

"With the mark in it?" says Harry dutifully.

"Yes! it is about a woman who is disappointed because—because her brother does not go to war, and she says of herself—

"Alas! why did not Heaven these members frail
With lively force and vigour strengthen, so
That I this silken gown . . . ?"

"Silken gown?" says downright Harry, with a look of inquiry.

"Well, sir, I know 'tis but Calimanco;—but so it is in the book—

" . . . this silken gown and slender veil
Might for a breastplate and a helm forego;
Then should not heat, nor cold, nor rain, nor hail,
Nor storms that fall, nor blust'ring winds that blow,
Withhold me; but I would, both day and night,
In pitched field or private combat, fight—"

"Fight? Yes, that I would! Why are both my brothers to be parsons, I say? One of my Papa's children ought to be a soldier!"

Harry laughed, a very gentle, kind laugh, as he looked at her. He felt that he would not like much to hit such a tender little warrior as that.

"Why," says he, holding a finger out, "I think here is a finger nigh as big as your arm. How would you stand up before a great, strong man? I should like to see a man try and injure you, though; I should just like to see him! You little, delicate, tender creature! Do you suppose any scoundrel would dare to do anything unkind to you?" And, excited by this flight of his imagination, Harry fell to walking up and down the room, too, chafing at the idea of any rogue of a Frenchman daring to be rude to Miss Hester Lambert.

It was a belief in this silent courage of his which subjugated Hetty, and this quality which she supposed him to possess, which caused her specially to admire him. Miss Hetty was no more bold, in reality, than Madam Erminia, whose speech she had been reading out of the book, and about whom Mr. Harry Warrington never heard one single word. He may have been in the room when brother George was reading his poetry out to the ladies, but his thoughts were busy with his own affairs, and he was entirely bewildered with your Clotildas and Erminias, and giants, and enchanters, and nonsense. No, Miss Hetty, I say and believe, had nothing of the virago in her composition; else, no doubt, she would have taken a fancy to a soft young fellow with a literary turn, or a genius for playing the flute, according to the laws of contrast and nature provided in those cases; and who has not heard how great, strong men have an affinity for frail, tender little women; how tender little women are attracted by great, honest, strong men; and how your burly heroes and champions of war are constantly henpecked? If Mr. Harry Warrington falls in love with a woman who is like Miss Lambert in disposition, and if he marries her—without being conjurors, I think we may all see what the end will be.

So, whilst Hetty was firing her little sarcasms into Harry, he for a while scarcely felt that they were stinging him, and let her shoot on without so much as taking the trouble to shake the little arrows out of his hide. Did she mean by her sneers and inuendos to rouse him into action? He was too magnanimous to understand such small hints. Did she mean to shame him by saying that she, a weak woman, would don the casque and breast-plate? The simple fellow either melted at the idea of her being in danger, or at the notion of her fighting fell a-laughing.

“Pray what is the use of having a strong hand if you only use it to hold a skein of silk for my mother?” cries Miss Hester; “and what is the good of being ever so strong in a drawing-room? Nobody wants you to throw anybody out of window, Harry! A strong man, indeed! I suppose there’s a stronger at Bartholomew Fair. James Wolfe is not a strong man. He seems quite weakly and ill. When he was here last he was coughing the whole time, and as pale as if he had seen a ghost.”

“I never could understand why a man should be frightened at a ghost,” says Harry.

“Pray, have you seen one, sir?” asks the pert young lady.

“No. I thought I did once at home—when we were boys; but it was only Nathan in his night-shirt; but I wasn’t frightened when I thought he was a ghost. I believe there’s no such things. Our nurses tell a pack of lies about ‘em,” says Harry, gravely. “George was a little frightened; but then he’s——” Here he paused.

“Then George is what?” asked Hetty.

“George is different from me, that’s all. Our mother’s a bold woman as ever you saw, but she screams at seeing a mouse—always does—can’t help it. It’s her nature. So, you see, perhaps my brother can’t bear ghosts. I don’t mind ‘em.”

"George always says, you would have made a better soldier than he."

"So I think I should, if I had been allowed to try. But he can do a thousand things better than me, or anybody else in the world. Why didn't he let me volunteer on Braddock's expedition? I might have got knocked on the head, and then I should have been pretty much as useful as I am now, and then I shouldn't have ruined myself, and brought people to point at me and say that I had disgraced the name of Warrington. Why mayn't I go on this expedition, and volunteer like Sir John Armitage? O Hetty! I'm a miserable fellow—that's what I am," and the miserable fellow paced the room at double quick time. "I wish I had never come to Europe," he groaned out.

"What a compliment to us! Thank you, Harry!" but presently, on an appealing look from the gentleman, she added, "Are you—are you thinking of going home?"

"And have all Virginia jeering at me! There's not a gentleman there that wouldn't, except one, and him my mother doesn't like. I should be ashamed to go home now, I think. You don't know my mother, Hetty. I ain't afraid of most things; but, somehow, I am of her. What shall I say to her, when she says, 'Harry, where's your patrimony?' 'Spent, Mother,' I shall have to say. 'What have you done with it?' 'Wasted it, Mother, and went to prison after.' 'Who took you out of prison?' 'Brother George, Ma'am, he took me out of prison; and now I'm come back, having done no good for myself, with no profession, no prospects, no nothing—only to look after negroes, and be scolded at home; or to go to sleep at sermons; or to play at cards, and drink, and fight cocks at the taverns about.' How can I look the gentlemen of the country in the face? I'm ashamed to go home in this way, I say. I must and will do something! What shall I do, Hetty? Ah! what shall I do?"

"Do? What did Mr. Wolfe do at Louisbourg? Ill as he was, and in love as we knew him to be, he didn't stop to be nursed by his mother, Harry, or to dawdle with his sweetheart. He went on the King's service, and hath come back covered with honour. If there is to be another great campaign in America, Papa says he is sure of a great command."

"I wish he would take me with him, and that a ball would knock me on the head and finish me," groaned Harry. "You speak to me, Hetty, as though it were my fault that I am not in the army, when you know I would give—give, forsooth, what have I to give?—yes! my life to go on service!"

"Life indeed!" says Miss Hetty, with a shrug of her shoulders.

"You don't seem to think that of much value, Hetty," remarked Harry, sadly. "No more it is—to anybody. I'm a poor useless fellow. I'm not even free to throw it away as I would like, being under orders here and at home."

"Orders indeed! Why under orders?" cries Miss Hetty. "Aren't you tall enough, and old enough, to act for yourself, and must you have George for a master here, and your mother for a schoolmistress at home? If I were a man, I would do something famous before I was two-and-twenty years old, that I would! I would have the world speak of me. I wouldn't dawdle at apron-strings. I wouldn't curse my fortune—I'd make it. I vow and declare I would!"

Now, for the first time, Harry began to wince at the words of his young lecturer.

"No negro on our estate is more a slave than I am, Hetty," he said, turning very red as he addressed her; "but then, Miss Lambert, we don't reproach the poor fellow for not being free. That isn't generous. At least, that isn't the way I understand honour. Perhaps with women it's different, or I may be wrong, and have no right to be hurt at a young girl telling me what my faults are. Perhaps my faults are not my faults—only my cursed luck. You have been talking ever so long about this gentleman volunteering, and that man winning glory, and cracking up their courage as if I had none of my own. I suppose, for the matter of that, I'm as well provided as other gentlemen. I don't brag: but I'm not afraid of Mr. Wolfe, nor of Sir John Armytage, nor of anybody else that ever I saw. How can I buy a commission when I've spent my last shilling, or ask my brother for more who has already halved with me? A gentleman of my rank can't go a common soldier—else, by Jupiter, I would! And if a ball finished me, I suppose Miss Hetty Lambert wouldn't be very sorry. It isn't kind, Hetty—I didn't think it of you."

"What is it I have said?" asks the young lady. "I have only said Sir John Armytage has volunteered, and Mr. Wolfe has covered himself with honour, and you begin to scold me! How can I help it if Mr. Wolfe is brave and famous? Is that any reason you should be angry, pray?"

"I didn't say angry," said Harry, gravely. "I said I was hurt."

"O, indeed! I thought such a little creature as I am couldn't hurt anybody! I'm sure 'tis mighty complimentary to me to say that a young lady whose arm is no bigger than your little finger can hurt such a great strong man as you!"

"I scarce thought you would try, Hetty," the young man said. "You see, I'm not used to this kind of welcome in this house."

"What is it, my poor boy?" asks kind Mrs. Lambert, looking in at the door at this juncture, and finding the youth with a very woe-worn countenance.

"O we have heard the story before, Mamma!" says Hetty, hurriedly. "Harry is making his old complaint of having nothing to do. And he is quite unhappy; and he is telling us so over and over again, that's all."

"So are you hungry over and over again, my dear! Is that a reason why your Papa and I should leave off giving you dinner?"

cries Mamma, with some emotion. "Will you stay and have ours, Harry? 'Tis just three o'clock!" Harry agreed to stay, after a few faint negations. "My husband dines abroad. We are but three women, so you will have a dull dinner," remarks Mrs. Lambert.

"We shall have a gentleman to enliven us, Mamma, I dare say!" says Madam Pert, and then looked in Mamma's face with that admirable gaze of blank innocence which Madam Pert knows how to assume when she has been specially and successfully wicked.

When the dinner appeared Miss Hetty came down stairs, and was exceedingly chatty, lively, and entertaining. Theo did not know that any little difference had occurred (such, alas, my Christian friends, will happen in the most charming families), did not know, I say, that anything had happened until Hetty's uncommon sprightliness and gaiety roused her suspicions. Hetty would start a dozen subjects of conversation—the King of Prussia, and the news from America; the last masquerade, and the highwayman shot near Barnet; and when her sister, admiring this volubility, inquired the reason of it, with her eyes,—

"O, my dear, you need not nod and wink at me!" cries Hetty. "Mamma asked Harry on purpose to enliven us, and I am talking until he begins,—just like the fiddles at the playhouse, you know, Hetty! First the fiddles. Then the play. Pray begin, Harry!"

"Hester!" cries Mamma.

"I merely asked Harry to entertain us. You said yourself, Mother, that we were only three women, and the dinner would be dull for a gentleman; unless, indeed, he chose to be very lively."

"I'm not that on most days—and, Heaven knows, on this day less than most," says poor Harry.

"Why on this day less than another? Tuesday is as good a day to be lively as Wednesday. The only day when we musn't be lively is Sunday. Well, you know it is, ma'am! We musn't sing, nor dance, nor do anything on Sunday."

And in this naughty way the young woman went on for the rest of the evening, and was complimented by her mother and sister when poor Harry took his leave. He was not ready of wit, and could not fling back the taunts which Hetty cast against him. Nay, had he been able to retort, he would have been silent. He was too generous to engage in that small war, and chose to take all Hester's sarcasms without an attempt to parry or evade them. Very likely the young lady watched and admired that magnanimity, while she tried it so cruelly. And after one of her fits of ill-behaviour, her parents and friends had not the least need to scold her, as she candidly told them, because she suffered a great deal more than they would ever have had her, and her conscience punished her a great deal more severely than her kind elders would have thought of doing. I suppose she lies awake all that night, and tosses and tumbles in her bed. I suppose she wets her pillow with tears, and should not mind about her sobbing: unless it kept her sister awake ; unless she was unwell the next day, and the doctor had to be fetched ; unless the whole family is to be put to discomfort ; mother to choke over her dinner in flurry and indignation ; father to eat his roast beef in silence and with bitter sauce ; everybody to look at the door each time it opens, with a vague hope that Harry is coming in. If Harry does not come, why at least does not George come ? thinks Miss Theo.

Some time in the course of the evening comes a billet from George Warrington, with a large nosegay of lilacs, per Mr. Gumbo. “ ‘ I send my best duty and regards to Mrs. Lambert and the ladies,’ ” George says, “ ‘ and humbly beg to present to Miss Theo this nosegay of lilacs, which she says she loves in the early spring. You must not thank me for them, please, but the gardener of Bedford House, with whom I have made great friends by presenting him with some dried specimens of a Virginian plant which some ladies don’t think as fragrant as lilacs.

“ ‘ I have been in the garden almost all the day. It is alive with sunshine and spring ; and I have been composing two scenes of you know what, and polishing the verses which the Page sings in the fourth act, under Sybilla’s window, when she cannot hear, poor thing, because she has just had her head off.’ ”

“ Provoking ! I wish he would not always sneer and laugh ! The verses are beautiful,” says Theo.

“ You really think so, my dear ? How very odd ! ” remarks Papa.

Little Het looks up from her dismal corner with a faint smile of humour. Theo’s secret is a secret for nobody in the house, it seems. Can any young people guess what it is ? Our young lady continues to read :

“ ‘ Spencer has asked the famous Mr. Johnson to breakfast to-morrow, who condescends to hear the play, and who won’t, I hope, be too angry because my heroine undergoes the fate of his in Irene. I have heard he came up to London himself as a young man with only his tragedy in his wallet. Shall I ever be able to get mine played ? Can you fancy the catcall music beginning, and the pit hissing at that perilous part of the fourth act, where my executioner comes out from the closet with his great sword, at the awful moment when he is called upon to amputate ? They say, Mr. Fielding, when the pit hissed at a part of one of his pieces, about which Mr. Garrick had warned him, said, “ Hang them, they have found it out, have they ? ” and finished his punch in tranquillity. I suppose his wife was not in the boxes. There are some women to whom I would be very unwilling to give pain, and there are some to whom I would give the best I have.’ ”

“ Whom can he mean ? The letter is to you, my dear. I protest he is making love to your mother before my face ! ” cries Papa to Hetty, who only gives a little sigh, puts her hand in her father’s hand, and then withdraws it.

“ ‘ To whom I would give the best I have. To-day it is only a bunch of lilacs. To-morrow it may be what?—a branch of rue—a sprig of bays, perhaps—anything, so it be my best and my all.

“ ‘ I have had a fine long day, and all to myself. What do you think of Harry playing truant?’ (Here we may imagine, what they call in France, or what they used to call, when men dared to speak or citizens to hear, sensation dans l’auditoire.)

“ ‘ I suppose Carpezan wearied the poor fellow’s existence out. Certain it is he has been miserable for weeks past; and a change of air and scene may do him good. This morning, quite early, he came to my room; and told me he had taken a seat in the Portsmouth machine, and proposed to go to the Isle of Wight, to the army there.’ ”

The army! Hetty looks very pale at this announcement, and her mother continues:—

“ ‘ And a little portion of it, namely, the thirty-second regiment, is commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Richmond Webb—the nephew of the famous old General under whom my grandfather Esmond served in the great wars of Marlborough. Mr. Webb met us at our uncle’s, accosting us very politely, and giving us an invitation to visit him at his regiment. Let my poor brother go and listen to his darling music of fife and drum! He bade me tell the ladies that they should hear from him. I kiss their hands, and go to dress for dinner, at the Star and Garter, in Pall Mall. We are to have Mr. Soame Jenyns, Mr. Cambridge, Mr. Walpole, possibly, if he is not too fine to dine in a tavern; a young Irishman, a Mr. Bourke, who they say is a wonder of eloquence and learning—in fine, all the wits of Mr. Dodsley’s shop. Quick, Gumbo, a coach, and my French grey suit! And if gentlemen ask me “ Who gave you that sprig of lilac you wear on your heart-side?” I shall call a bumper, and give Lilac for a toast.’ ”

I fear there is no more rest for Hetty on this night than on the previous one, when she had behaved so mutinously to poor Harry Warrington. Some secret resolution must have inspired that gentleman, for after leaving Mr. Lambert’s table, he paced the streets for a while, and appeared at a late hour in the evening at Madam de Bernstein’s house in Clarges Street. Her ladyship’s health had been somewhat ailing of late, so that even her favourite routs were denied her, and she was sitting over a quiet game of écarté, with a divine of whom our last news were from a lock-up house hard by that in which Harry Warrington had been himself confined. George, at Harry’s request, had paid the little debt under which Mr. Sampson had suffered temporarily. He had been at his living for a year. He may have paid and contracted ever so many debts, have been in and out of jail many times since we saw him. For some time past he had been back in London stout and hearty as usual, and ready for any invitation to cards or claret. Madame de Bernstein did not care to have her game interrupted by her nephew, whose conversation had little interest now for the fickle old woman. Next to the very young, I suppose the very old are the most selfish. Alas, the heart hardens as the blood ceases to run. The cold snow strikes down from the head, and checks the glow of feeling. Who wants to survive into old age after abdicating all his faculties one by one, and be sans teeth, sans eyes, sans memory, sans hope, sans sympathy? How fared it with those patriarchs of old who lived for their nine centuries, and when were life's conditions so changed that, after three score years and ten, it became but a vexation and a burden?

Getting no reply but Yes and No to his brief speeches, poor Harry sat awhile on a couch opposite his aunt, who shrugged her shoulders, had her back to her nephew, and continued her game with the Chaplain. Sampson sat opposite Mr. Warrington, and could see that something disturbed him. His face was very pale, and his countenance disturbed and full of gloom. "Something has happened to him, ma'am," he whispered to the Baroness.

"Bah!" She shrugged her shoulders again, and continued to deal her cards. "What is the matter with you, sir?" she at last said, at a pause in the game, "that you have such a dismal countenance? Chaplain, that last game makes us even, I think!"

Harry got up from his place. "I am going on a journey: I am come to bid you good-bye, aunt," he said, in a very tragical voice.

"On a journey! Are you going home to America? I mark the king, Chaplain, and play him."

No, Harry said: he was not going to America yet: he was going to the Isle of Wight for the present.

"Indeed!—a lovely spot!" says the Baroness. "Bon jour, mon ami, et bon voyage!" And she kissed a hand to her nephew.

"I mayn't come back for some time, aunt," he groaned out.

"Indeed! We shall be inconsolable without you! Unless you have a spade, Mr. Sampson, the game is mine. Good-bye, my child! No more about your journey at present: tell us about it when you come back!" And she gaily bade him farewell. He looked for a moment piteously at her, and was gone.

"Something grave has happened, Madam," says the Chaplain.

"O! The boy is always getting into scrapes! I suppose he has been falling in love with one of those country-girls—what are their names, Lamberts?—with whom he is ever dawdling about. He has been doing no good here for some time. I am disappointed in him, really quite grieved about him—I will take two cards if you please—again?—quite grieved. What do you think they say of his cousin—the Miss Warrington who made eyes at him when she thought he was a prize—they say the King has remarked her, and the Yarmouth is créving with rage. He, he!—those methodistical Warringtons! They are not a bit less worldly than their neighbours; and, old as he is if the Grand Signior throws his pocket-handkerchief, they will jump to catch it!"

"All, Madam ; how your ladyship knows the world ! " sighs the Chaplain. I propose, if you please ! "

"I have lived long enough in it, Mr. Sampson, to know something of it. 'Tis sadly selfish, my dear sir, sadly selfish ; and everybody is struggling to pass his neighbour ! No, I can't give you any more cards. You haven't the king ? I play queen, knave, and a ten,—a sadly selfish world, indeed. And here comes my chocolate ! "

The more immediate interest of the cards entirely absorbs the old woman. The door shuts out her nephew and his cares. Under his hat, he bears them into the street, and paces the dark town for a while.

"Good God !" he thinks, "what a miserable fellow I am, and what a spendthrift of my life I have been ! I sit silent with George and his friends. I am not clever and witty as he is. I am only a burthen to him : and, if I would help him ever so much, don't know how. My dear Aunt Lambert's kindness never tires, but I begin to be ashamed of trying it. Why, even Hetty can't help turning on me ; and when she tells me I am idle and should be doing something, ought I to be angry ? The rest have left me. There's my cousins and uncle and my lady my aunt, they have shown me the cold shoulder this long time. They didn't even ask me to Norfolk when they went down to the country, and offer me so much as a day's partridge shooting. I can't go to Castlewood—after what has happened ; I should break that scoundrel William's bones ; and, faith, am well out of the place altogether."

He laughs a fierce laugh as he recals his adventures since he has been in Europe. Money, friends, pleasure, all have past away, and he feels the past like a dream. He strolls into White's Chocolate House, where the waiters have scarce seen him for a year. The parliament is up. Gentlemen are away ; there is not even any play going on :—not that he would join it, if there were. He has but a few pieces in his pocket ; George's drawer is open, and he may take what money he likes thence ; but very, very sparingly will he avail himself of his brother's repeated invitation. He sits and drinks his glass in moody silence. Two or three officers of the Guards enter from St. James's. He knew them in former days, and the young men, who have been already dining and drinking on guard, insist on more drink at the club. The other battalion of their regiment is at Winchester : it is going on this great expedition, no one knows whither, which everybody is talking about. Cursed fate that they do not belong to the other battalion ; and must stay and do duty in London and at Kensington ! There is Webb, who was of their regiment : he did well to exchange his company in the Coldstreams for the lieutenant-colonelcy of the thirty-second. He will be of the expedition. Why, everybody is going ; and the young gentlemen mention a score of names of men of the first birth and fashion, who have volunteered. "It ain't Hanoverians this time, commanded by the big Prince," says one young gentleman (whose relatives may have been Tories forty years ago)—“ it’s Englishmen, with the Guards at the head of ‘em, and a Marlborough for a leader ! Will the Frenchmen ever stand against them ? No, by George, they are irresistible.” And a fresh bowl is called, and loud toasts are drunk to the success of the expedition.

Mr. Warrington, who is a cup too low, the young Guardsmen say, walks away when they are not steady enough to be able to follow him, thinks over the matter on his way to his lodgings, and lies thinking of it all through the night.

“ What is it, my boy ?” asks George Warrington of his brother when the latter enters his chamber very early on a blushing May morning.

“ I want a little money out of the drawer,” says Harry, looking at his brother. “ I am sick and tired of London.”

“ Good Heavens ! Can anybody be tired of London ?” George asks, who has reasons for thinking it the most delightful place in the world.

“ I have for one. I am sick and ill,” says Harry.

“ You and Hetty have been quarrelling ?”

“ She don’t care a penny piece about me, nor I for her neither,” says Harry, nodding his head. “ But I am ill, and a little country air will do me good,” and he mentions how he thinks of going to visit Mr. Webb in the Isle of Wight, and how a Portsmouth coach starts from Holborn.

“ There’s the till, Harry,” says George, pointing from his bed. “ Put your hand in, and take what you will. What a lovely morning, and how fresh the Bedford House garden looks.”

“ God bless you, brother !” Harry says.

“ Have a good time, Harry !” and down goes George’s head on the pillow again, and he takes his pencil and note-book from under his bolster, and falls to polishing his verses, as Harry, with his cloak over his shoulder and a little valise in his hand, walks to the inn in Holborn whence the Portsmouth Machine starts.

CHAPTER XV.

MELPOMENE.

GEORGE WARRINGTON by no means allowed his legal studies to obstruct his comfort and pleasures, or interfere with his precious health. Madam Esmond had pointed out to him in her letters that though he wore a student's gown, and sat down with a crowd of nameless people to hall-commons, he had himself a name, and a very ancient one, to support, and could take rank with the first persons at home or in his own country; and desired that he would study as a gentleman, not a mere professional drudge. With this injunction the young man complied obediently enough; so that he may be said not to have belonged to the rank and file of the law, but may be considered to have been a volunteer in her service, like some young gentlemen of whom we have just heard. Though not so exacting as she since has become—though she allowed her disciples much more leisure, much more pleasure, much more punch, much more frequenting of coffee-houses and holiday-making, than she admits now-a-days, when she scarce gives her votaries time for amusement, recreation, instruction, sleep, or dinner—the law a hundred years ago was still a jealous mistress, and demanded a pretty exclusive attention. Murray, we are told, might have been an Ovid, but he preferred to be Lord Chief Justice, and to wear ermine instead of bays. Perhaps Mr. Warrington might have risen to a peerage and the woolsack, had he studied very long and assiduously,—had he been a dexterous courtier, and a favourite of attorneys: had he been other than he was, in a word. He behaved to Themis with a very decent respect and attention; but he loved letters more than law always; and the black letter of Chaucer was infinitely more agreeable to him than the Gothic pages of Hale and Coke.

Letters were loved indeed in those quaint times, and authors were actually authorities. Gentlemen appealed to Virgil or Lucan in the Courts or the House of Commons. What said Statius, Juvenal—let alone Tully or Tacitus—on such and such a point? Their reign is over now, the good old Heathens: the worship of Jupiter and Juno is not more out of mode than the cultivation of Pagan poetry or ethics. The age of economists and calculators has succeeded, and Tooke's Pantheon is deserted and ridiculous. Now and then, perhaps, a Stanley kills a kid, a Gladstone hangs up a wreath, a Lytton burns incense, in honour of the Olympians. But what do they care at Lambeth, Birmingham, the Tower Hamlets, for the ancient rites, divinities, worship? Who the plague are the Muses, and what is the use of all that Greek and Latin rubbish? What is Elicon, and who cares? Who was Thalia, pray, and what is the length of her i? Is Melpomene's name in three syllables or four? And do you know from whose design I stole that figure of Tragedy which adorns the initial G of this chapter?

Now, it has been said how Mr. George in his youth, and in the long leisure which he enjoyed at home, and during his imprisonment in the French fort on the banks of Monongahela, had whiled away his idleness by paying court to Melpomene; and the result of their union was a tragedy, which has been omitted in "Bell's Theatre," though I dare say it is no worse than some of the pieces printed there. Most young men pay their respects to the Tragic Muse first, as they fall in love with women who are a great deal older than themselves. Let the candid reader own, if ever he had a literary turn, that his ambition was of the very highest, and that however, in his riper age, he might come down in his pretensions, and think that to translate an ode of Horace, or to turn a song of Waller or Prior into decent alcaics or sapphics, was about the utmost of his capability, tragedy and epic only did his green unknowing youth engage, and no prize but the highest was fit for him.

George Warrington, then, on coming to London, attended the theatrical performances at both houses, frequented the theatrical coffee-houses, and heard the opinions of the critics, and might be seen at the Bedford between the plays, or supping at the Cecil along with the wits and actors when the performances were over. Here he gradually became acquainted with the players and such of the writers and poets as were known to the public. The tough old Macklin, the frolicsome Foote, the vivacious Hippisley, the sprightly Mr. Garrick himself, might occasionally be seen at these houses of entertainment ; and our gentleman, by his wit and modesty, as well, perhaps, as for the high character for wealth which he possessed, came to be very much liked in the coffee-house circles, and found that the actors would drink a bowl of punch with him, and the critics sup at his expense with great affability. To be on terms of intimacy with an author or an actor has been an object of delight to many a young man ; actually to hob and nob with Bobadil or Henry the Fifth or Alexander the Great, to accept a pinch out of Aristarchus's own box, to put Juliet into her coach, or hand Monimia to her chair, are privileges which would delight most young men of a poetic turn ; and no wonder George Warrington loved the theatre. Then he had the satisfaction of thinking that his mother only half approved of plays and playhouses, and of feasting on fruit forbidden at home. He gave more than one elegant entertainment to the players, and it was even said that one or two distinguished geniuses had condescended to borrow money of him.

And as he polished and added new beauties to his masterpiece, we may be sure that he took advice of certain friends of his, and that they gave him applause and counsel. Mr. Spencer, his new acquaintance, of the Temple, gave a breakfast at his chambers in Fig Tree Court, when Mr. Warrington read part of his play, and the gentlemen present pronounced that it had uncommon merit. Even the learned Mr. Johnson, who was invited, was good enough to say that the piece had showed talent. It warred against the unities, to be sure ; but these had been violated by other authors, and Mr. Warrington might sacrifice them as well as another. There was in Mr. W.'s tragedy a something which reminded him both of Coriolanus and Othello. "And two very good things too, sir !" the author pleaded. " Well, well, there was no doubt on that point ; and 'tis certain your catastrophe is terrible, just, and being in part true, is not the less awful," remarks Mr. Spencer.

Now the plot of Mr. Warrington's tragedy was quite full indeed of battle and murder. A favourite book of his grandfather had been the life of old George Frundsberg of Mindelheim, a colonel of foot-folk in the Imperial service at Pavia fight, and during the wars of the Constable Bourbon : and one of Frundsberg's military companions was a certain Carpzow, or Carpezan, whom our friend selected as his tragedy hero.

His first act, as it at present stands in Sir George Warrington's manuscript, is supposed to take place before a convent on the Rhine, which the Lutherans, under Carpezan, are besieging. A godless gang these Lutherans are. They have pulled the beards of Roman friars, and torn the veils of hundreds of religious women. A score of these are trembling within the walls of the convent yonder, of which the garrison, unless the expected succours arrive before mid-day, has promised to surrender. Meanwhile there is armistice, and the sentries within look on with hungry eyes, as the soldiers and camp people gamble on the grass before the gate. Twelve o'clock, ding, ding, dong ! it sounds upon the convent bell. No succours have arrived. Open gates, warder ! and give admission to the famous Protestant hero, the terror of Turks on the Danube, and Papists in the Lombard plains—Colonel Carpezan ! See, here he comes, clad in complete steel, his hammer of battle over his shoulder, with which he has battered so many infidel sconces, his flags displayed, his trumpets blowing. “ No rudeness, my men,” says Carpezan, “ the wine is yours, and the convent larder and cellar are good : the church plate shall be melted : any of the garrison who choose to take service with Gaspar Carpezan are welcome, and shall have good pay. No insult to the religious ladies ! I have promised them a safe conduct, and he who lays a finger on them, hangs ! Mind that, Provost Marshal ! ” The Provost Marshal, a huge fellow in a red doublet, nods his head.

“ We shall see more of that Provost Marshal, or executioner,” Mr. Spencer explains to his guests.

“ A very agreeable acquaintance, I am sure,—shall be delighted to meet the gentleman again ! ” says Mr. Johnson, wagging his head over his tea. “ This scene of the mercenaries, the camp-followers, and their wild sports, is novel and stirring, Mr. Warrington, and I make you my compliments on it. The Colonel has gone into the convent, I think ? Now let us hear what he is going to do there.”

The Abbess, and one or two of her oldest ladies, make their appearance before the conqueror. Conqueror as he is, they beard him in their sacred halls. They have heard of his violent behaviour in conventional establishments before. That hammer, which he always carries in action, has smashed many sacred images in religious houses. Pounds and pounds of convent plate is he known to have melted, the sacrilegious plunderer ! No wonder the Abbess-Princess of St. Mary’s, a lady of violent prejudices, free language, and noble birth, has a dislike to the low-born heretic who lords it in her convent, and tells Carpezan a bit of her mind, as the phrase is. This scene, in which the lady gets somewhat better of the Colonel, was liked not a little by Mr. Warrington’s audience at the Temple. Terrible as he might be in war, Carpezan was shaken at first by the Abbess’s brisk opening charge of words ; and, conqueror as he was, seemed at first to be conquered by his actual prisoner. But such an old soldier was not to be beaten ultimately by any woman. “ Pray, madam,” says he, “ how many ladies are there in your convent, for whom my people shall provide conveyance ? The Abbess, with a look of much trouble and anger, says that, besides herself, the noble Sisters of Saint Mary’s House are twenty—twenty-three.” She was going to say twenty-four, and now says twenty-three ? “ Ha ! why this hesitation ? ” asks Captain Ulric, one of Carpezan’s gayest officers.

The dark chief pulls a letter from his pocket. “ I require from you, madam,” he says, sternly, to the lady abbess, “ the body of the noble lady Sybilla of Hoya. Her brother was my favourite captain, slain by my side, in the Milanese. By his death, she becomes heiress of his lands. 'Tis said a greedy uncle brought her hither; and fast immured the lady against her will. The damsel shall herself pronounce her fate—to stay a cloistered sister of Saint Mary's, or to return to home and liberty, as Lady Sybil, Baroness of ——." Ha! The Abbess was greatly disturbed by this question. She says, haughtily: "There is no Lady Sybil in this house: of which every inmate is under your protection, and sworn to go free. The Sister Agnes was a nun professed, and what was her land and wealth revert to this Order."

"Give me straightway the body of the Lady Sybil of Hoya!" roars Carpezan, in great wrath. "If not, I make a signal to my reiters, and give you and your convent up to war."

"Faith, if I lead the storm, and have my right, 'tis not my Lady Abbess that I'll choose" (says Captain Ulric), "but rather some plump, smiling, red-lipped maid like—like—" Here, as he, the sly fellow, is looking under the veils of the two attendant nuns, the stern Abbess cries, "Silence, fellow, with thy ribald talk! The lady, warrior, whom you ask of me is passed away from sin, temptation, vanity, and three days since our Sister Agnes—died."

At this announcement Carpezan is immensely agitated. The Abbess calls upon the Chaplain to confirm her statement. Ghastly and pale, the old man has to own that three days since the wretched Sister Agnes was buried.

This is too much! In the pocket of his coat of mail Carpezan has a letter from Sister Agnes herself, in which she announces that she is going to be buried indeed, but in an oubliette of the convent, where she may either be kept on water and bread, or die starved outright. He seizes the unflinching Abbess by the arm, whilst Captain Ulric lays hold of the Chaplain by the throat. The Colonel blows a blast upon his horn: in rush his furious lanzknechts from without. Crash, bang! They knock the convent walls about. And in the midst of flames, screams, and slaughter, who is presently brought in by Carpezan himself, and fainting on his shoulder, but Sybilla herself. A little sister nun (that gay one with the red lips) had pointed out to the Colonel and Ulric the way to Sister Agnes's dungeon, and, indeed, had been the means of making her situation known to the Lutheran chief.

"The convent is suppressed with a vengeance," says Mr. Warrington. "We end our first act with the burning of the place, the roars of triumph of the soldiery, and the outcries of the nuns. They had best go change their dresses immediaiely, for they will have to be court ladies in the next act—as you will see." Here the gentlemen talked the matter over. If the piece were to be done at Drury Lane, Mrs. Pritchard would hardly like to be Lady Abbess, as she doth but appear in the first act. Miss Pritchard might make a pretty Sybilla, and Miss Gates the attendant nun. Mr. Garrick was scarce tall enough for Carpezan—though, when he is excited, nobody ever thinks of him but as big as a grenadier. Mr. Johnson owns Woodward will be a good Ulric, as he plays the Mercutio parts very gaily—and so, by one and t'other, the audience fancies the play already on the boards, and casts the characters.

In act the second, Carpezan has married Sybilla. He has enriched himself in the wars, has been ennobled by the Emperor, and lives at his castle on the Danube in state and splendour.

But, truth to say, though married, rich, and ennobled, the Lord Carpezan was not happy. It may be that in his wild life, as leader of condottieri on both sides, he had committed crimes which agitated his mind with remorse. It may be that his rough soldier-manners consort ill with his imperious high-born bride. She led him such a life—I am narrating as it were the Warrington manuscript, which is too long to print in entire—taunting him with his low birth, his vulgar companions, whom the old soldier loved to see about him, and so forth—that there were times when he rather wished that he had never rescued this lovely, quarrelsome, wayward vixen from the oubliette out of which he fished her. After the bustle of the first act this is a quiet one, and passed chiefly in quarrelling between the Baron and Baroness Carpezan, until horns blow, and it is announced that the young King of Bohemia and Hungary is coming hunting that way.

Act III. is passed at Prague, whither his Majesty has invited Lord Carpezan and his wife, with noble offers of preferment to the latter. From Baron he shall be promoted to be Count, from Colonel he shall be General-in-Chief. His wife is the most brilliant and fascinating of all the ladies of the court—and as for Carpzoff—”

“O, stay—I have it—I know your story, sir, now,” says Mr. Johnson. “ ‘Tis in Meteranus, in the Theatrum Universum. I read it in Oxford as a boy—Carpezanus or Carpzoff—”

“That is the fourth act,” says Mr. Warrington. In the fourth act the young King's attentions towards Sybilla grow more and more marked; but her husband, battling against his jealousy, long refuses to yield to it, until his wife's criminality is put beyond a doubt—and here he read the act, which closes with the terrible tragedy which actually happened. Being convinced of his wife's guilt, Carpezan caused the executioner who followed his regiment to slay her in her own palace. And the curtain of the act falls just after the dreadful deed is done, in a side chamber illuminated by the moon shining through a great oriel window, under which the King comes with his lute, and plays the song which was to be the signal between him and his guilty victim.

This song, (writ in the ancient style, and repeated in the piece, being sung in the third act previously at a great festival given by the King and Queen,) was pronounced by Mr. Johnson to be a happy imitation of Mr. Waller's manner, and its gay repetition at the moment of guilt, murder, and horror, very much deepened the tragic gloom of the scene.

“But whatever came afterwards?” he asked. “I remember in the Theatrum, Carpezan is said to have been taken into favour again by Count Mansfield, and doubtless to have murdered other folks on the reformed side.”

Here our poet has departed from historic truth. In the fifth act of "Carpezan" King Louis of Hungary and Bohemia (sufficiently terror-stricken, no doubt, by the sanguinary termination of his intrigue) has received word that the Emperor Solyman is invading his Hungarian dominions. Enter two noblemen who relate how, in the council which the King held upon the news, the injured Carpezan rushed infuriated into the royal presence, broke his sword, and flung it at the King's feet —along with a glove which he dared him to wear, and which he swore he would one day claim. After that wild challenge the rebel fled from Prague, and had not since been heard of; but it was reported that he had joined the Turkish invader, assumed the turban, and was now in the camp of the Sultan, whose white tents glance across the river yonder, and against whom the King was now on his march. Then the King comes to his tent with his generals, prepares his order of battle, and dismisses them to their posts, keeping by his side an aged and faithful knight, his master of the horse, to whom he expresses his repentance for his past crimes, his esteem for his good and injured Queen, and his determination to meet the day's battle like a man.

"What is this field called?"

"Mohacz, my liege!" says the old warrior, adding the remark that "Ere set of sun, Mohacz will see a battle bravely won."

Trumpets and alarms now sound; they are the cymbals and barbaric music of the Janissaries: we are in the Turkish camp, and yonder, surrounded by turbaned chiefs, walks the Sultan Solyman's friend, the conqueror of Rhodes, the redoubted Grand Vizier.

Who is that warrior in an Eastern habit, but with a glove in his cap? "Tis Carpezan. Even Solyman knew his courage and ferocity as a soldier. He knows the ordinance of the Hungarian host: in what arms King Louis is weakest: how his cavalry, of which the shock is tremendous, should be received, and inveigled into yonder morass, where certain death may await them—he prays for a command in the front, and as near as possible to the place where the traitor King Louis will engage. "Tis well," says the grim Vizier, "our invincible Emperor surveys the battle from yonder tower. At the end of the day, he will know how to reward your valour." The signal-guns fire—the trumpets blow—the Turkish captains retire, vowing death to the infidel, and eternal fidelity to the Sultan.

And now the battle begins in earnest, and with those various incidents which the lover of the theatre knoweth. Christian knights and Turkish warriors clash and skirmish over the stage. Continuous alarms are sounded. Troops on both sides advance and retreat. Carpezan, with his glove in his cap, and his dreadful hammer smashing all before him, rages about the field, calling for King Louis. The renegade is about to slay a warrior who faces him, but recognising young Ulric, his ex-captain, he drops the uplifted hammer, and bids him fly, and think of Carpezan. He is softened at seeing his young friend, and thinking of former times when they fought and conquered together in the cause of Protestantism. Ulric bids him to return, but of course that is now out of the question. They fight. Ulric will have it, and down he goes under the hammer. The renegade melts in sight of his wounded comrade, when who appears but King Louis, his plumes torn, his sword hacked, his shield dented with a thousand blows which he has received and delivered during the day's battle. Ha! who is this? The guilty monarch would turn away (perhaps Macbeth may have done so before), but Carpezan is on him. All his softness is gone. He rages like a fury. "An equal fight!" he roars. "A traitor against a traitor! Stand, King Louis! False King, false knight, false friend —by this glove in my helmet, I challenge you!" And he tears the guilty token out of his cap, and flings it at the King.

Of course they set-to, and the monarch falls under the terrible arm of the man whom he has injured. He dies, uttering a few incoherent words of repentance, and Carpezan, leaning upon his murderous mace, utters a heart-broken soliloquy over the royal corpse. The Turkish warriors have gathered meanwhile: the dreadful day is their own. Yonder stands the dark Vizier, surrounded by his janissaries, whose bows and swords are tired of drinking death. He surveys the Renegade standing over the corpse of the King.

"Christian renegade!" he says, "Allah has given us a great victory. The arms of the Sublime Emperor are everywhere triumphant. The Christian King is slain by you."

"Peace to his soul! He died like a good knight," gasps Ulric, himself dying on the field.

"In this day's battle," the grim Vizier continues, "no man hath comported himself more bravely than you. You are made Bassa of Transylvania! Advance bowmen—Fire!"

An arrow quivers in the breast of Carpezan.

"Bassa of Transylvania, you were a traitor to your King, who lies murdered by your hand!" continues grim Vizier. "You contributed more than any soldier to this day's great victory. 'Tis thus my sublime Emperor meetly rewards you. Sound trumpets! We march for Vienna to-night!"

And the curtain drops as Carpezan, crawling towards his dying comrade, kisses his hands, and gasps—

"Forgive me, Ulric!"

When Mr. Warrington has finished reading his tragedy, he turns round to Mr. Johnson, modestly, and asks,—

"What say you, sir? Is there any chance for me?"

But the opinion of this most eminent critic is scarce to be given, for Mr. Johnson had been asleep for some time, and frankly owned that he had lost the latter part of the play.

The little auditory begins to hum and stir as the noise of the speaker ceased. George may have been very nervous when he first commenced to read; but everybody allows that he read the last two acts uncommonly well, and makes him a compliment upon his matter and manner. Perhaps everybody is in good humour because the piece has come to an end. Mr. Spencer's servant hands about refreshing drinks. The Templars speak out their various opinions whilst they sip the negus. They are a choice band of critics, familiar with the pit of the theatre, and they treat Mr. Warrington's play with the gravity which such a subject demands.

Mr. Fountain suggests that the Vizier should not say "Fire!" when he bids the archers kill Carpezan,—as you certainly don't fire with a bow and arrows. A note is taken of the objection.

Mr. Figtree, who is of a sentimental turn, regrets that Ulric could not be saved, and married to the comic heroine.

"Nay, sir, there was an utter annihilation of the Hungarian army at Mohacz," says Mr. Johnson, "and Ulric must take his knock on the head with the rest. He could only be saved by flight, and you wouldn't have a hero run away! Pronounce sentence of death against Captain Ulric, but kill him with honours of war."

Messrs. Essex and Tanfield wonder to one another who is this queer looking pert whom Spencer has invited, and who contradicts everybody, and suggest a boat up the river and a little fresh air after the fatigues of the tragedy.

The general opinion is decidedly favourable to Mr. Warrington's performance; and Mr. Johnson's opinion, on which he sets a special value, is the most favourable of all. Perhaps Mr. Johnson is not sorry to compliment a young gentleman of fashion and figure like Mr. W. "Up to the death of the heroine," he says, "I am frankly with you, sir. And I may speak, as a play-wright who have killed my own heroine, and had my share of the plausus in theatro. To hear your own lines nobly delivered to an applauding house, is indeed a noble excitement. I like to see a young man of good name and lineage who condescends to think that the Tragic Muse is not below his advances. It was to a sordid roof that I invited her, and I asked her to rescue me from poverty and squalor. Happy you, sir, who can meet her upon equal terms, and can afford to marry her without a portion!"

"I doubt whether the greatest genius is not debased who has to make a bargain with Poetry," remarks Mr. Spencer.

"Nay, sir," Mr. Johnson answered, "I doubt if many a great genius would work at all without bribes and necessities; and so a man had better marry a poor Muse for good and all, for better or worse, than dally with a rich one. I make you my compliment to your play, Mr. Warrington, and if you want an introduction to the stage, shall be very happy if I can induce my friend Mr. Garrick to present you."

"Mr. Garrick shall be his sponsor," cried the florid Mr. Figtree. "Melpomene shall be his godmother, and he shall have the witches' cauldron in Macbeth for a christening font."

"Sir, I neither said font nor godmother," remarks the man of letters. "I would have no play contrary to morals or religion: nor, as I conceive, is Mr. Warrington's piece otherwise than friendly to them. Vice is chastised, as it should be, even in Kings, though perhaps we judge of their temptations too lightly. Revenge is punished—as not to be lightly exercised by our limited notion of justice. It may have been Carpezan's wife who perverted the King, and not the King who led the woman astray. At any rate, Louis is rightly humiliated for his crime, and the Renegade most justly executed for his. I wish you a good afternoon, gentlemen!" And with these remarks, the great author took his leave of the company.

Towards the close of the reading, General Lambert had made his appearance at Mr. Spencer's chambers, and had listened to the latter part of the tragedy. The performance over, he and George took their way to the latter's lodgings in the first place, and subsequently to the General's own house, where the young author was expected, in order to recount the reception which his play had met from his Temple critics.

At Mr. Warrington's apartments in Southampton Row, they found a letter awaiting George, which the latter placed in his pocket unread, so that he might proceed immediately with his companion to Soho. We may be sure the ladies there were eager to know about the Carpezan's fate in the morning's small rehearsal. Hetty said George was so shy, that perhaps it would be better for all parties if some other person had read the play. Theo, on the contrary, cried out:

"Read it, indeed! Who can read a poem better than the author who feels it in his heart? And George had his whole heart in the piece!"

Mr. Lambert very likely thought that somebody else's whole heart was in the piece, too, but did not utter this opinion to Miss Theo.

"I think Harry would look very well in your figure of a Prince," says the General. "That scene where he takes leave of his wife before departing for the wars reminds me of your brother's manner not a little."

"O, Papa! surely Mr. Warrington himself would act the Prince's part best!" cries Miss Theo.

"And be deservedly slain in battle at the end?" asks the father of the house.

"I did not say that; only that Mr. George would make a very good Prince, Papa!" cries Miss Theo.

"In which case he would find a suitable Princess, I have no doubt. What news of your brother Harry?"

George, who has been thinking about theatrical triumphs; about monumentum aere perennius; about lilacs; about love whispered and tenderly accepted, remembers that he has a letter from Harry in his pocket, and gaily produces it.

"Let us hear what Mr. Truant says for himself, Aunt Lambert!" cries George, breaking the seal.

Why is he so disturbed, as he reads the contents of his letter?

Why do the women look at him with alarmed eyes? And why, above all, is Hetty so pale?

“Here is the letter,” says George, and begins to read it.

“RYDE, June 1, 1758.

“I did not tell my dearest George what I hoped and intended, when I left home on Wednesday. ‘Twas to see Mr. Webb at Portsmouth or the Isle of Wight, wherever his Reg^t was, and if need was to go down on my knees to him to take me as volunteer with him on the Expedition. I took boat from Portsmouth, where I learned that he was with our regiment incamp^t at the village of Ryde. Was received by him most kindly, and my petition granted out of hand. That is why I say our regiment. We are eight gentlemen volunteers with Mr. Webb, all men of birth, and good fortunes except poor me, who don’t deserve one. We are to mess with the officers; we take the right of the column, and have always the right to be in front, and in an hour we embark on board his Majesty’s Ship the Rochester of 60 guns, while our Commodore’s, Mr. Howe’s, is the Essex, 70. His squadron is about 20 ships, and I should think 100 transports at least. Though ‘tis a secret expedition, we make no doubt France is our destination—where I hope to see my friends the Monsieurs once more, and win my colours à la pointe de mon épée, as we used to say in Canada. Perhaps my service as interpreter may be useful; I speaking the language not so well as some one I know, but better than most here.

“I scarce venture to write to our mother to tell her of this step. Will you, who have a coaxing tongue will wheadle any one, write to her as soon as you have finisht the famous tradgedy? Will you give my affectionate respects to dear General Lambert and ladies: and if any accident should happen, I know you will take care of poor Gumbo as belonging to my dearest best George’s most affectionate brother, “HENRY E. WARRINGTON.

“P.S.—Love to all at home when you write, including Dempster, Mountain, and Fanny M. and all the people, and duty to my honored mother, wishing I had pleased her better. And if I said anything unkind to dear Miss Hester Lambert, I know she will forgive me, and pray God bless all.—H. E. W.

“To G. ESMOND WARRINGTON, Esq.,

“At Mr. Scrase’s house in Southampton Row,

“Opposite Bedford House Gardens, London.”

He has not read the last words with a very steady voice. Mr. Lambert sits silent, though not a little moved. Theo and her mother look at one another; but Hetty remains with a cold face and a stricken heart. She thinks “He is gone to danger, perhaps to death, and it was I sent him!”

IMPORTANT FAMILY MEDICINE.

NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS,

THE

MOST CERTAIN PRESERVER OF HEALTH,

A MILD, YET SPEEDY, SAFE, AND

EFFECTUAL AID IN CASES OF INDIGESTION, AND ALL STOMACH COMPLAINTS,

AND, AS A NATURAL CONSEQUENCE,

PURIFIER OF THE BLOOD, AND A SWEETENER OF THE WHOLE SYSTEM.

DIGESTION is a weakness or want of power in the digestive juices in the stomach to convert what we eat and drink into healthy matter, for the proper nourishment of the whole system. It is caused by everything which weakens the system in general, or the stomach in particular. From it proceed nearly all the diseases to which we are liable; for it is very certain, that if we could always keep the stomach right we should die by old age or accident. Indigestion produces a great variety of unpleasant sensations: amongst the most prominent of its miserable effects are a want of, or an inordinate, appetite, sometimes attended with a constant craving for drink, a distension or swelling of enlargement of the stomach, flatulency, heartburn, pains in the stomach, acidity, a pleasant taste in the mouth, perhaps sickness, rumbling noise in the bowels: in some cases of depraved digestion there is nearly a complete disrelish for food, but still the appetite is not greatly impaired, as at the stated period of meals persons so afflicted can eat heartily, although without much gratification; a long train of nervous symptoms are so frequent attendants, general debility, eat languidness, and incapacity for exertion. The minds of persons so afflicted frequently become irritable and desponding, and great anxiety is observable in the countenance; they appear thoughtful, melancholy, and dejected, under great apprehension of some imaginary danger, will start at any unexpected noise or occurrence, and become so agitated that they require some time to calm and collect themselves: yet for all this the mind is exhilarated without much difficulty; pleasing events, society, will for a time dissipate all appearance of disease; but the excitement produced by an agreeable change vanishes soon after the cause has gone by. Other symptoms are, violent palpitations, restlessness, the sleep disturbed by frightful dreams and startings, and affording little or no refreshment; occasionally there is much moaning, with a sense of weight and oppression upon the chest, nightmare, &c.

It is almost impossible to enumerate all the symptoms of this first invader upon the constitution, as in a hundred cases of Indigestion there will probably be something peculiar to each; but, be they what they may, they are all occasioned by the food becoming a burden rather than a support to the stomach; and in all its stages the medicine most wanted is that which will afford speedy and effectual assistance to the digestive organs, and give energy to the nervous and muscular systems,—nothing can more speedily or with more certainty effect so desirable an object than Norton's Extract of Camomile Flowers. The herb has from time immemorial been highly esteemed in England as a grateful anodyne, imparting an aromatic bitter to the taste, and a pleasing degree of warmth and strength to the stomach, and in all cases of indigestion, gout in the stomach, windy colic, and general weakness, it has for ages been strongly recommended by the most eminent practitioners as very useful and beneficial. The great, indeed only, objection to its use has been the large quantity of water which it takes to dissolve a small part of the flowers, and which must be taken with it into the stomach. It requires a quarter of a pint of boiling water to dissolve the soluble portion of one drachm of Camomile Flowers; and, when one or even two ounces may be taken with advantage, it must at once be seen how impossible it is to take a proper dose of this wholesome herd in the form of tea; and the only reason why it has not long since been placed the very first in rank of all restorative medicines is, that in taking it the stomach has always been loaded with water, which tends in a great measure to counteract, and very frequently wholly to destroy the effect. It must be evident that loading a weak stomach with a large quantity of water, merely for the purpose of conveying into it a small quantity of medicine must be injurious; and that the medicine must possess powerful renovating properties only to counteract the bad effects likely to be produced by the water. Generally speaking, this has been the case with Camomile Flowers, a herb possessing the highest restorative qualities, and when properly taken, decidedly the most speedy restorer, and the most certain preserver of health.

These PILLS are wholly CAMOMILE, prepared by a peculiar process, accidentally discovered, and known only to the proprietor, and which he firmly believes to be one of the most valuable modern discoveries in medicine, by which all the essential and extractive matter of more than an ounce of the flowers is concentrated in four moderate sized pills. Experience has afforded the most ample proof that they possess all the fine aromatic and stomachic properties for which the herb has been esteemed; and, as they are taken into the stomach unencumbered by any diluting or indigestible substance, in the same degree has their benefit been more immediate and decided. Mild in their operation and pleasant in their effect, they may be taken at any age, and under any circumstance, without danger or inconvenience. A person exposed to cold and wet a whole day or night could not possibly receive any injury from taking them, but on the contrary, they would effectually prevent a cold being taken. After a long acquaintance with and strict observance of the medicinal properties of Norton's Camomile Pills, it is only doing them justice to say, that they are really the most valuable of all TONIC MEDICINES. By the word tonic is meant a medicine which gives strength to the stomach sufficient to digest in proper quantities all wholesome food, which increases the power of every nerve and muscle of the human body, or, in other words, invigorates the nervous and muscular systems. The solidity or firmness of the whole tissue of the body which so quickly follows the use of Norton's Camomile Pills, their certain and speedy effects in repairing the partial dilapidations from time or intemperance, and their lasting salutary influence on the whole frame, is most convincing, that in the smallest compass is contained the largest quantity of the tonic principle, of so peculiar a nature as to pervade the whole system, through which it diffuses health and strength sufficient to resist the formation of disease, and also to fortify the constitution against contagion; as such, their general use is strongly recommended as a preventative during the prevalence of malignant fever or other infectious diseases, and to persons attending sick rooms they are invaluable as in no one instance have they ever failed in preventing the taking of illness even under the most trying circumstances.

As Norton's Camomile Pills are particularly recommended for all stomach complaints or indigestion, it will probably be expected that some advice should be given respecting diet, though after all that has been written upon the subject, after the publication of volume upon volume, after the country has, as it were, been inundated with practical essays on diet, as a means of prolonging life, it would be unnecessary to say more; did we not feel it our duty to make the humble endeavour of inducing the public to regard them not, but to adopt that course which is dictated by nature, by reason, and by common sense. Those persons who study the wholesomes, and are governed by the opinions of writers on diet, are uniformly both unhealthy in body and weak in mind. There can be no doubt that the palate is designed to inform us what is proper for the stomach, and of course that must best instruct us what food to take and what to avoid: we want no other adviser. Nothing can be more clear than that those articles which are agreeable to the taste, were by nature intended for our food and sustenance, whether liquid or solid, foreign or of native production: if they are pure and unadulterated, no harm need be dreaded by the

; they will only injure by abuse. Consequently, whatever the palate approves, eat and drink always in moderation, but never excess; keeping in mind that the first process of digestion is performed in the mouth, the second in the stomach; and that, in order that the stomach may be able to do its work properly, it is requisite the first process should be well performed; this consists in masticating or chewing the solid food, so as to break down and separate the fibres and small substances of meat and vegetables, mixing them well, and blending the whole together before they are swallowed; and it is particularly urged upon all to take sufficient time to their meals and never eat hasty. If you conform to this short and simple, but comprehensive advice, and find that there are various things which others eat and drink with pleasure and without inconvenience, and which would be pleasant to yourself only that they disagree, you may once conclude that the fault is in the stomach, that it does not possess the power which it ought to do, that it wants assistance, and the sooner that assistance is afforded the better. A very short trial of this medicine will best prove how soon it will put the stomach in a condition to perform with ease all the work which nature intended for it. By its use you will soon be able to enjoy, in moderation, whatever is agreeable to the taste, and unable to name one individual article of food which disagrees with the stomach. Never forget that a small meal well digested affords more nourishment to the system than a large meal, even of the same food, when digested imperfectly. Let the dish be ever so delicious, ever so enticing a variety offered, the taste ever so enchanting, never forget that appearance tends to preserve health, and that health is the soul of enjoyment. But should an impropriety be at any time, or ever often committed, by which the stomach becomes overloaded or disordered, render it immediate aid by taking a dose of Norton's Camomile Pills, which will so promptly assist in carrying off the burden thus imposed upon it that all will soon be right again.

It is most certainly true that every person in his lifetime consumes a quantity of noxious matter, which if taken at one meal would be fatal: it is these small quantities of noxious matter, which are introduced into our food, either by accident or wilful adulteration, which we find so often upset the stomach, and not unfrequently lay the foundation of illness, and perhaps final ruination to health. To preserve the constitution, it should be our constant care, if possible, to counteract the effect of these small quantities of unwholesome matter; and whenever, in that way, an enemy to the constitution finds its way into the stomach, a friend should be immediately sent after it, which would prevent its mischievous effects, and expel it altogether; no better friend can be found, nor one which will perform the task with greater certainty than NORTON'S CAMOMILE PILLS. And let it be observed that the longer this medicine is taken the less it will be wanted; it can in no case become habitual, as its entire action is to give energy and force to the stomach, which is the spring of life, the source from which the whole frame draws its succour and support. After an excess of eating or drinking, and upon every occasion of the general health being at all disturbed, these PILLS should be immediately taken, as they will stop and eradicate disease at its commencement. Indeed, it is most confidently asserted, that by the timely use of this medicine only, and a common degree of caution, any person may enjoy all the comforts within his reach, may pass through life without an illness, and with the certainty of attaining a healthy OLD AGE.

On account of their volatile properties, they must be kept in bottles; and if closely corked their qualities are neither impaired by time nor injured by any change of climate whatever. Price 13½d. and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions. The large bottle contains the quantity of three small ones, or PILLS equal to fourteen ounces of CAMOMILE FLOWERS.

Sold by nearly all respectable Medicine Vendors.

Be particular to ask for "NORTON'S PILLS," and do not be persuaded to purchase an imitation.

LORD BROUGHAM

in his recent address at Liverpool, thus speaks of this universally popular Periodical: "CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER began this year with a sale of THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND.

The Tales composed for working men's hours of relaxation are of a kind that address themselves both to the understanding and to the heart—at once giving lessons of instruction and fostering the kindly affections. . . . It is from experience, no less than from the relations of others in the higher classes, that we may describe it as impossible to read some of these stories with a dry eye."

A Portrait of the Right Hon. and Right Rev. the LORD BISHOP OF LONDON, printed separately on Fine Paper, was published, without extra charge, with No. 62 of CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER. That Number, with the Engraving, can only be obtained during one month from the date of this, without extra charge.

January 31st, 1859.

THE TRIAL OF LORD WILLIAM RUSSELL.

A magnificent Engraving of this memorable event in English History, measuring 26 inches by 19, will be supplied to the Subscribers to CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER at the same price as a single Number of that Journal,—namely, ONE PENNY. Specimens will be issued to the Trade forthwith.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"This is one of the cheap (penny) weekly publications which were noticed by Lord Brougham in his extraordinary speech at Liverpool, at the meeting of the Society for promoting Social Science. It is deserving of a place in every family, as a medium of amusement and instruction. The illustrations are good, and the reading it contains from distinguished pens so diversified, pleasant, and useful, that a penny a week spent in the purchase of such a work is indeed well laid out. No wonder that it has found its way to the hands of hundreds of thousands. . . . Besides the 'tales,' the 'Family Paper' contains a great quantity of miscellaneous reading, both original and selected, which increases its value as a medium of useful information on almost all subjects, except politics. There are some papers worthy of special notice; one on the 'Sunday Question' may be mentioned, which, could space be afforded, we would give at full length, advocating as it does the observance of a day of rest as being a high boon to man from his Maker, and which a regard for their own interests, and comfort both here and hereafter, should urge all classes—if possible, the poorest and industrious most of all—to claim it as their right against all who would deprive them of it or any portion of it."—Newcastle Courant.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER.

"The other contents of this 'Family Paper' are of the most miscellaneous character, combining, however, very cleverly, the useful with the attractive, and instructing as well as amusing the reader."—The Scotsman.

"We regard this volume as one of the most successful efforts of the newspaper press. We can account for the enormous circulation of cheap periodicals that cater for the gratification of the worst passions of the vulgar; but here we have a periodical of high aims, and exalted moral tendency, circulating in hundreds of thousands. It is impossible to estimate the good that such tales as 'Hope Evermore' must have done in the hundreds of thousands of families in which it is eagerly read. The success of this work we reckon a hopeful sign of our country. We accept it as a proof that the millions will prefer literature of a good moral tendency to that of an inferior class, provided that it can be had as cheaply and conveniently."—Glasgow Examiner.

"A marvel of cheapness, considering the price, and the immense mass of matter, instructive and entertaining, of which it consists."—Glasgow Saturday Post.

"No family circle in our midst, therefore, should be without Mr. Cassell's elegant and instructive Paper."—Scottish Press.

"This is a wonderful paper for a penny. Its contents are varied, and all its tales have a moral tendency."—Ayr Advertiser.

"It is really a Family Paper, embracing, as it does, almost every topic of general interest, and having, as it were, a word for every one."—Edinburgh Daily Express.

"Happily, for our illustrated, if not illustrious friend, however, he is about the last who deserves the lash. In these days, when meretricious tales and prints are made to pander to the depraved appetites of the lower orders, through the medium of the illustrated penny journals, John Cassell, and his 'Family Paper,' stand nobly forth champions of public decency, private sobriety, and general morality—bulwarks to the deluge of base insidious trash that corrupts and misinforms the popular mind. Than his principal tale writer, John Frederic Smith, there is not a better or more entertaining in England: than his well got-up and carefully-finished illustrations, there are none more pleasing, or, perhaps, half so much so, at the price."—Southern Times, Weymouth.

"We commend Cassell's Paper to the notice of the benevolent gentlemen who have the management of the Mutual Improvement Societies in our villages, for we believe that in publications of this class, which are at once amusing and elevating, they will find the most valuable aid in the work they are attempting. Although published at the price of 1d. weekly, the literary matter of Cassell's Paper is in every respect excellent, and the engravings with which it is embellished are equal in quality to any that are to be found in periodicals of greater pretensions."—Kentish Gazette.

"The aim of this serial is to furnish to the industrial classes especially a paper to amuse, instruct, and elevate. Every tale, and indeed all its contents, have this object in view. It takes rank far above the ordinary cheap publications with which every little bookseller and news-agent's shop is teeming. The publication altogether is one that we can cordially recommend as a marvel of cheapness."—Birmingham Journal.

"A glance at its contents leads to the conclusion that it is one of the very best penny publications of the day; higher in literary standing, better in tone, and far better in paper and style of printing, than any of its illustrated competitors with which we are acquainted."—Belfast News Letter.

"As a journal for the industrial classes, it is peculiarly adapted, and is unexcelled, being calculated to amuse, instruct, and elevate their minds. The engravings are invariably well executed, whilst the literary matter is always of a superior character."—Darlington and Stockton Times.

"We have here No. 1 of an improved series of John Cassell's 'Illustrated Family Paper.' It will rank among the best of his publications. Mr. Cassell aims at the instruction and elevation of the masses, and we think that the 'Family Paper' will subserve this important end. It will be to the people a useful and valuable periodical, affording unfailing amusement for many a long winter's evening."—Bradford Observer.

"This is one of the most remarkable volumes that have appeared since the era of cheap literature had its first experimental beginnings. John Cassell's 'Illustrated Family Paper' is filled with literary matter of high excellence, and so varied, withal, as to set at defiance all classified enumeration within the limits of a newspaper critique."—Londonderry Standard.

"The contents are exceedingly varied: tales, biographies, poetry, sketches, popular scientific papers, household hints, chemical experiments, anecdotes, &c., combine to interest and edify the reader, while numerous pictorial illustrations render its pages additionally attractive. Mr. Cassell has never more successfully catered for the mental appetite of the million than when he produced this useful and beautiful work—and that is saying a great deal."—Dunfermline Standard.

"Advocating, by popular means, the cause of temperance, and convincingly illustrating the advantages of industry and intelligence—the publishers and editors of this serial have been eminently successful."—Liverpool Mail.

"This publication is conducted in a very admirable spirit, and may be the means of doing much good. It aims at higher purposes than merely to amuse, and it labours in a good cause with ability and enthusiasm. Assuredly Mr. Cassell labours assiduously to further those great ends, and his work deserves a helping hand from all who are interested in the progress of man."—Star of Waent.

"We do not know of any publication so suited to the wants of the working man as this paper, as its price places it within the reach of the humbler classes."—Carmarthen Journal.

"Its contents are as miscellaneous as the cabinet of an amateur."—Elgin Courier.

"It comprises a great fund of varied literature of a popular class—tales, sketches, biography, poetry, instructive matter, and miscellanea—interspersed with illustrations, which render its claims to ultra-cheapness undeniable."—Bristol Mercury.

"If our readers are not already acquainted with this cheapest of all 'Illustrated Family Papers,' in its serial form, we advise them to become acquainted with it, and, moreover, to become possessed of it."—Brechin Advertiser.

PRIZE TALES.

"In short, the 'Family Paper' is arranged not only to give amusement but instruction in the domestic circle, and is specially adapted for the young."—North British Mail.

"This is an old friend, and so well known that we need only say that it is as good as ever. It is an excellent aid to the work of popular enlightenment."—City Press.

"The first volume of Mr. Cassell's penny illustrated paper has just been concluded, and it is not too much to say that it is as meritorious and as remarkable a production as any that he had previously given to the world. Indeed, we know not where we could lay our hands on any similar publication issued upon such moderate terms, at once so entertaining and instructive. In addition to notices of all the passing events, which form the principal staple of newspapers, it contains well written tales, which have for their object a higher purpose than the mere amusement of the readers, viz.—the exposure of those bane of the working classes, ignorance and intemperance. In short, the publication is a literary marvel, considering its price, and cannot fail of proving an important auxiliary in the cause of progress, intellectual, social, and moral, amongst the working classes in this country, an object which Mr. Cassell has evidently much at heart."—Plymouth and Devonport Journal.

A few Copies of the OLD SERIES of CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER, consisting of 4 Volumes Demy Folio, price 5s. 6d., each Volume in paper covers, or 7s. 6d. bound in cloth, are still on sale.

POPULAR LITERATURE: PRIZE TALES.

TWO PREMIUMS,

The one of TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY POUNDS, and the other of ONE HUNDRED POUNDS, are hereby offered by JOHN CASSELL, for the best and second best Tale submitted for competition.

THE TALES must be illustrative of the triumph of morality, sobriety, and industry, over idleness, apathy, and self-indulgence. They must fulfil all the ordinary requirements of a popular story; namely, by carrying the hero or heroes through a succession of scenes and incidents calculated to awaken and sustain the interest of the reader. The writers of the Tales will be at liberty to adopt any plan they may think proper, as to the general construction of plot, or the introduction of incidents. At the same time the end and aim of the composition must be strictly borne in mind; which are to show how much individuals may accomplish by their own exertion, and how they may rise from poverty and obscurity to wealth and distinction, through the influence of character and conduct. Care should be taken to display in a strong light the actual condition of the working classes, exhibiting their difficulties, their wants, and their aspirations; the evils by which they are beset; the temptations to which they are exposed; and the trials which they have to endure; together with any practical remedial suggestions introduced in the form of dialogue or incident.

It having been suggested that an extension of time would be desirable, manuscripts will be received up to September 1st, 1859, instead of August 1st, as before advertised.

Each manuscript must be accompanied by a sealed note, containing the real name and address of the writer, and both note and manuscript must be marked by a corresponding initial, or by a motto. No letter will be opened until after the decision of the adjudicators, and then, those notes only which accompany the successful manuscripts.

The candidates will bear in mind that a tale written for the object above mentioned must possess all the requisites of a popular and entertaining fiction in the construction of the plot, the development of the characters, and the denouement of the story.

THE RIGHT HON. LORD BROUHAM and MATTHEW DAVENPORT HILL, ESQ., Q.C., Recorder of Birmingham, &c., have kindly consented to act with Mr. CASSELL as adjudicators.

The Conditions on which the Prizes are offered (in addition to the above) are:—

I.—The Copyright of the successful Tales to be the Property of the donor of the Prize, who is to be at liberty to publish them in any form he may deem desirable.

II.—The award of any two of the three adjudicators to be binding and conclusive.

Each tale must make not less than twenty-six weekly portions of the same length as that of the leading tale now in progress in CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER.

All manuscripts or correspondence respecting them must be addressed—JOHN CASSELL, MESSRS. CASSELL, PETTER, and GALPIN, La Belle Sauvage Yard, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

SOCIAL SCIENCE AND THE WORKING CLASSES.

PRIZE ESSAYS.

TEN Prizes of Five Pounds each are hereby offered by JOHN CASSELL for the best Ten Essays or Papers, to be written by Men or Women belonging exclusively to the Working Classes, upon the subjects hereinafter named.

The object in offering these Prizes is to elicit from the Working Classes their opinion, advice, and suggestions as to how far the question, now understood by the designation of Social Science, can, and may be, worked out by the Working Classes themselves, apart from any legislative interference, whether municipal or parliamentary.

The qualification for competition is, that the writer is really what is understood by the term operative, or the wife, sister, or daughter of an operative.

Each Essay or Paper must be accompanied by a sealed note, containing the real name and trade of the writer, and bearing on the outside cover a signature corresponding to that which is affixed to the Essay or Paper.

Each Article to make about three to four columns of the same length and in the same size type as the full-length columns of the "Living Celebrities," now being published in "CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY PAPER."

The accepted Essays are to be the property and at the disposal of the donor of the Prizes, who shall be at liberty to publish them in any way which he may consider the best calculated to give them the greatest amount of efficiency.

The following Noblemen and Gentlemen have already consented to act, with Mr. CASSELL, as adjudicators, and toward the Premiums offered:—

THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF CARLISLE.
THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY.
THE RIGHT REV. THE LORD BISHOP OF CARLISLE.
THE RIGHT HON. LORD BROUGHAM AND VAUX.
THE RIGHT HON. LORD JOHN RUSSELL.
THE RIGHT HON. THE CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND.

SIR WALTER C. TREVELYAN, Bart.
SIR BENJAMIN C. BRODIE, Bart.
SIR FITZROY KELLY, Her Majesty's Attorney-General.
MATTHEW DAVENPORT HILL, Esq., Q.C., Recorder of Birmingham.

PROPOSED TOPICS.

EDUCATION.—How far is self-culture possible? Self-government the basis of self-education. Each man, in the capacity of a self-educator, must exercise paramount and subordinate qualities, being at once the ruler and the subject, the teacher and the pupil. The duty, as a ruler over one's self, of acting with impartiality, rectitude, and uniformity; the duty, as a subject to the ruler, or as a pupil to the teacher, of order, obedience, and application. The urgent necessity for self-control. The command of the mind over the body, of the mental power over the physical appetite. The danger in self-education of lax discipline, of working one day and idling the next. Steady application essential. Advantages within the reach of the working classes. Cheap literature. Mutual Improvement Societies. Easy methods of acquiring knowledge. What are they? How far practicable? What success has attended them?

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.—What is physical education? An important part of self-education. The mind in a great measure dependent on the condition of the body. Close and intimate connection of the mental and physical powers. The body subordinate to the mind only so long as it is properly cared for. Risk to the mental faculties of neglecting health and vigour of body. The importance of physical exercise and outdoor recreation.

SANITARY REFORM.—How far can working men and working women promote sanitary reform without the aid of municipal or parliamentary regulations? Personal cleanliness. Domestic cleanliness. Morals. Baths, washhouses, &c. &c. Its effect on wages. Duration of working powers, and expenditure in medicines, &c. Its preventative qualities as to intoxication. Especially the several results desirable from improved dwellings.

TEMPERANCE AND PROVIDENT HABITS.—Temperance considered as a question of political economy. Intoxicating liquors—their cost and utter unutility in answering any good end. Their injurious effects on health, comfort, morality, and, financially, on the individual and on the general public. Statistics to show the importance of trifles, expended in unnecessary indulgences. Provident Habits. Benefit societies, their advantage and disadvantages. When held at public-houses leading to intemperate habits. Clubs, savings banks, life assurances, &c. &c.

THE ADVANTAGES OF SUNDAY.—What has Sunday done, and what might it do, for the working man in a sanitary point of view? In cultivating domestic affection? In promoting moral and religious education? Why we should keep Sunday on prudential motives. Sunday clothes. To make Sunday a day of decent care in dress and cleanliness. The influence of suitable dress on manners and deportment.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTES.—Their aim and object. What is required in order to make them more popular? How worked. The importance of the classes for whom they are especially intended supporting and governing their associations. The plan of one class finding the money and another arranging its disposal, radically wrong in principle. Lectures. Discussions. Classes. Reading-rooms. Lending library, &c. &c.

COURTESY.—How far working men can promote good manners. Politeness and kindly feeling. Courtesy in the workshop or factory. Suppression of bad language. Self-respect. Mutual respect. Civility to one another. Politeness at home. Courtesy. Benevolence in little things. The mind under the influence of a strong desire to spread happiness, instinctively seizes every opportunity of being courteous and kind.

LABOUR AND RELAXATION.—Importance of relaxation in connection with labour. Healthy recreations. Out-door games. How to make home attractive. Amusements. Gardening. Cultivation of flowers. The vivarium. Drawing. Music. Instructive and entertaining reading. Difference between the two; the one should never be mistaken for the other.

INDISCREET MARRIAGES.—What is meant by an early marriage? References to age and preparation for the duties of married life. Physiological objections. Pecuniary objections. Preparation for the marriage state. Marriage at an early age, when effected with prudence, an object of wholesome ambition, but involving, without such prudence, a perpetual struggle and discomfort. Domestic economy. Self-control.

THE PATERNAL HEADSHIP.—What are the duties and responsibilities of a father as the head of the household. How may he best discharge those obligations. Self-respect. Decision of character. Consistency of conduct. Regulations of the house. Sleeping apartments; delicacy of feeling; courtesy, &c., &c. The duty of children to both parents. Maternal authority and influence. The obligation resting upon the members of the family to render respect and obedience to the heads of the household.

The above suggestions are submitted for the consideration of the competitors. It is not designed that they should be slavishly followed. They are intended simply as materials for thinking, to put the mental machinery in motion, but not to guide it in any positive direction; competitors must exercise their own discretion. Each writer should confine himself to such matters as he feels that he can best treat, that is to say, where experience, or knowledge otherwise acquired, has given him peculiar advantages for arriving at just views. Each writer, before he enters on a topic, should ascertain by self-examination whether or not he has anything to communicate which combines enough of novelty and utility to justify him in claiming the public ear.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND,

From the Earliest Period to the Present Time. To be completed in Four Volumes. Volumes I., II., and III. are now ready, price 6s. each, bound in cloth. This splendid Work has attained a circulation worthy of its intrinsic merit, as well as of the national interest of the subject. Every man who lays claim to education at all, ought at least to be familiar with the history of his own country. Such information has never before been presented in so attractive a form as in this "Illustrated History of England." The Illustrations by Gilbert, Philippoteaux, T. H. Nicholson, F. Gilbert, O. Jewitt, H. Linton, and other Artists, executed in the first style of Art, render it valuable even as a merely Ornamental Work; while the character of the Literary Matter is vouched for by the name of WILLIAM HOWITT, who is writing the Text. In order to render this Work as comprehensive as possible, occasional Chapters are given on the Progress of the Nation, tracing the rise and advancement of Science and Art, and treating of the Manners and Customs of the People. These Chapters are Illustrated with many curious Engravings from originals, only to be seen in the British Museum and other rare collections. Published in Weekly Numbers, price 1d.; also in Monthly Parts, 5d. and 6d. each, or post free, 7d. and 8d.; and Quarterly Sections, 1s. 3d. each, or post free, 1s. 7d. Cases for binding the Volumes may be obtained of all Booksellers, price 1s. 6d. each.

"In all these English histories the soundest principles are laid down in almost every instance. The interests of virtue, of liberty, and of peace—the best interests of mankind—are faithfully and ably maintained throughout."—Lord Brougham, in his recent address at Liverpool to the Association for the Promotion of Social Science.

"We take the opportunity to corroborate Lord Brougham's view of the merits of some of Mr. Cassell's efforts by instancing the 'ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ENGLAND.' The commencement of it to the reign of Edward I., written by J. F. Smith, contains passages of true historical eloquence, and it is very respectably continued by W. Howitt."—Weekly Dispatch.

"In this work, we are happy to find, something more is aimed at than a deteriorated reprint of Hume and Smollett, or a clumsy narrative serving to string together the numerous engravings. Both Mr. J. F. Smith and Mr. W. Howitt seem to have entered upon their work with a zealous desire to deal with it in a creditable manner; and the result is a good, useful History of England. This work is most profusely illustrated, almost every page being adorned with one or more woodcuts. These are very spirited, and as highly finished as the extreme cheapness of the work would allow. Many fac-similes of drawings in ancient MSS., rare books, and so forth, add great interest and value to the publication."—Brighton Herald.

"A Publication that bears about it the stamp of research, plateness, and vigour of style, and an alluring amount of anecdote and other refreshing matter, which renders the dull array of chronological facts and dry historical records at once interesting and amusing, must always be a welcome addition to the library of every one of moderate means."—Kendal Mercury.

"The substantial quarto before us, consisting of upwards of 620 pages, and forming the first instalment of the Publication, would be a conspicuous addition to any working man's library, while its literary and other merits are sufficient to commend it to all classes of readers."—The Bristol Mercury.

The LADIES' TREASURY consists of 32 pages quarto, is handsomely printed on good paper, and has attained a fivefold larger circulation than any other publication devoted exclusively to ladies. Annual Subscription (post free), 7s. A Specimen Copy will be forwarded on receipt of Six Stamps.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The LADIES' TREASURY is true to its name. It combines amusement with instruction: it gives Lessons in French and Italian; an Hour with Mamma, and a Picture of Humming Birds, Fashion, and Fancy Work; On Dits, and Aunt Deborah's Receipt Book—this last being a very useful study, indeed, for ladies of 'fat, forty, or sweet sixteen.' The TREASURY is profusely illustrated."—The Edinburgh News.

"A really fashionable and beautifully illustrated magazine, deserving the patronage of ladies generally. In fact, we cannot do less than strongly recommend it to the support of all. 'Fruits and Flowers' is a magnificent engraving, worth all the money charged for the work."—Somerset County Herald.

"We congratulate the conductors on the fact, and must say that theirs is the most thoroughly ladies' magazine, in fashion, taste, work, sentiment, and even light literature, that reaches our table."—Southern Times.

"On seeing the first number of this Periodical, which was commenced rather more than a year ago, we had doubts whether the specimen put into our hands was not of too high a standard to be maintained, considering the cheapness of the work. We could not help noticing it with commendation, on account of the variety and excellence of its articles, and their tendency to one purpose—advancement of the female sex in intelligence, and the attainment of those accomplishments which accord with their nature and position in life. Amusement is furnished, at the same time that elegant and useful employment is provided for leisure hours, by giving the newest and most interesting patterns of needlework, together with a variety—about eight—of illustrations, executed so as to do credit to the artistical department—and all for what sum—as the cost of the monthly part? Half-a-crown? No, less than that. A shilling, perhaps? No, less than even a shilling. Just for sixpence! What female will be satisfied to forego the pleasure and profit of taking in "The Ladies' Treasury"?—Newcastle Courant.

"The LADIES' TREASURY is rich in illustrations of every kind suited to the tastes of the fair sex. The letterpress contents are equally appropriate, and, if read with attention, cannot fail to instruct and amuse."—Nottingham Journal.

TWO VOLUMES OF THE LADIES' TREASURY

CASSELL'S MODEL COPY-BOOKS:

INSURING

A Good, Fluent, and Rapid Handwriting,

IN

A COURSE OF EIGHT PROGRESSIVE BOOKS.

Foolscap Quarto Edition, price 3d. each, post free, 4d. each, or 2s. 4d. per Set; post Quarto, 6d. each, or post free, 7d., or 4s. 6d. per Set.

"CASSELL'S MODEL COPY-BOOKS" are framed upon a system which obliges the learner, from the first, to unite beauty of form with easy and rapid execution. Nothing can be more absurd than to teach the beginner, with cramped hand, to imitate straight strokes and pothooks, which there never will be occasion to use, and which all have to be discarded, and, if possible, unlearnt, when the ordinary handwriting is assumed for the every-day purposes of life. The design of this Course of Books is to instruct the learner from the beginning to pass over with freedom correct models of those forms only which form component portions of a perfect handwriting. By placing before the pupil a model of a somewhat larger size, to be passed over, say fifty times, with a pencil (which is far better and cleaner to commence to learn writing with than a pen, and the transition from which to a pen is always easily accomplished), his hand and arm are carried through such an amount of practice, that a general ability with the pen is necessarily acquired. By this method surprising results have been obtained, and the pupils have always become expert penmen and good ready writers. N.B. Special Pencils have been prepared, and may be had, price 2d. each, or three for 8d., post free. Each genuine pencil is marked "MODEL COPY-BOOK PENCIL."

NARRATIVES AND ADVENTURES OF TRAVELLERS IN AFRICA.

Illustrated with Numerous Plates and Engravings on Wood, and containing a Map of Africa, corrected down to the Present Time, showing the Parts traversed by Drs. Livingstone and Barth. This Work contains a complete Synopsis of all the Discoveries made in this interesting country up to the present time, and comprises a mass of valuable and entertaining information for all classes of readers. Handsomely bound in cloth, price 5s.

The News of the World, in speaking of this work, says:—"Public attention is much occupied at present with South Africa, and this well got up work supplies a great deal of information respecting that part of the globe which will be acceptable. The nature of the country, the character of the people, the diversity of tribes, the plants which grow there, and the animals which roam over its wastes and through its forests, are not only described but illustrated by anecdotes of a telling, and some of them of a harrowing description. It is a most entertaining volume, and will afford delight to the general reader by the winter's fireside, whilst it is resorted to also by the emigrant for information. The experience of recent travellers is wrought into the narrative, and a map of the country is given, which will be found useful by those who have occasion to consult it. Any one who is desirous of resorting to the South African colonies, will find in this volume a full account of the peculiarities of a settler's life, and be prepared for what he will have to undergo there."

THE GREAT SERMONS OF THE GREAT PREACHERS,

OR, THE MASTERPIECES OF PULPIT ELOQUENCE.

This important and valuable Work has been prepared with a view to place within the reach of the Public at large, and especially of Students, specimens of the Masterpieces of Pulpit Eloquence of all countries and all ages; and as such it has been widely welcomed both by the general reader and by men of all grades and opinions. Complete in 1 vol., cloth boards, price 7s. 6d., or in 2 vols., price 4s. each.

"No more acceptable work can be placed in the hands of the theological student."

"A book that should find a place in every family library."

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet Street, and all Booksellers.

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC NEWS:

A Weekly Record of the Progress of Photography.

Price 3d.; Stamped, 4d.

The "PHOTOGRAPHIC NEWS," as its name implies, aims at the collection and publication of all intelligence instructive and interesting to Photographers. As a medium of communication between manipulators in the art, such a record of their inquiries and the results of their experiments cannot fail to advance the science, and impart additional value to the columns of the "Photographic News."

The "Photographic News" not only chronicles all the intelligence and discoveries made in Photography, but forms, as it progresses, a complete manual of the science; and aims at being, in every respect, the Photographic Educator, teaching the aspiring student, by easy, simple, and progressive rules, the whole of this marvellous art. Instruction is given in the production of pictures, positive and negative, through the agency of light on paper, glass, and metallic plates, to which are being added all the various receipts, as practised by the most successful operators throughout the world.

The following selection from the articles which have already appeared in its pages, will show the comprehensiveness of its general contents:—

The Stereomicroscope: by M. Clandet.
The Future of Photography: by M. A. Bellac.
Mr. Fox Talbot's New Discovery—Photoglyphic Engraving (with a specimen on plate paper).
On the Calotype Process.
Notes for Alpine Photographers.
On Copying Paintings by Means of Photography.
On Dry Collodion: by M. Collard.
Nitrate of Uranium in Photography.
Stereoscopic Pictures from Flat Surfaces.

Positive Printing—Fothergill's Process.

The Stereoscopic Angle.

Steel-facing Copper Plates.

The following are also being continued weekly:—
Lessons on Colouring Photographs—Photographic Chemistry—Dictionary of Photography—Catechism of Photography—Photographic Notes and Queries—Photographers' Difficulties, and the Method of overcoming them—Letters from Correspondents, &c. &c.

Early in March will be Published, price 7s. 6d., bound in cloth, the FIRST VOLUME of the PHOTOGRAPHIC NEWS, containing a greater amount of practical information upon subjects connected with Photography than will be found in any other publication, embracing all the recent discoveries, inventions, and improvements in the Art.

The "Photographic News" can be ordered through all Booksellers and News-agents, price 3d. weekly, Stamped 4d. Office, La Belle Sauvage Yard, London, E.C.

POPULAR EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

LORD BROUHAM, in his speech before the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, thus alludes to Cassell's Educational Works:—"His Educational Course and Popular Educator give popular and sound information on natural and moral science: the former in a volume of nearly 600 pages, with tolerably good plates, costing under half-a-crown; and of this, and other similar works, the joint circulation is 300,000."

Cassell's Popular Educator. The most Comprehensive and Compendious Educational Work ever issued from the press. It is complete in Six Volumes, crown 4to, price 4s. 6d. each, in cloth boards, or post free, 5s. 2d.; or in Three Double Volumes, price 8s. 6d. each, or post free, 9s. 8d. These volumes contain Lessons, in a popular and easily-acquired form, in English, French, German, Latin, Italian, and Greek; in Arithmetic, Book-keeping, Algebra, Geometry, and Mathematics generally; also in Writing, Drawing, Music, Geography, Geology, Biography, and Natural Philosophy, and altogether form an Encyclopaedia of Instruction, commencing with Simple Rules, immediately interesting to the Pupil; by means of which, any one possessing the power to read the English language, may become a perfect scholar in all the above branches of education.

 This Work is being re-issued in Weekly Numbers, price 1½d.; Parts, 7d. and 8½d.; and Divisions, 1s. each.

The first 3 vols. of the "Popular Educator" are published in a cheaper form. Price, neatly bound in cloth, 3s. 6d. each, or post free, 4s. 2d.; or the 3 vols. bound in 1, price 9s. 6d., or post free, 10s. 6d.

The Historical Educator, complete in 2 vols. crown 4to, price 6s. each in cloth boards, or 11s. 6d. the 2 vols. in 1. These vols. contain:—I. The History of Geography, with upwards of three hundred curious and interesting Engravings, the preparation of which incurred an outlay of nearly One Thousand Pounds. II. The History of the United States of America, by Mary Howitt. III. The History of Greece, by Messrs. E. L. and J. Godkin. IV. The History of English Literature, by Dr. J. R. Beard. V. Chronology, from the Earliest Period.

The Biblical Educator, complete in 2 vols. crown 4to, price 5s. 6d. each, in cloth boards, post free, 6s. 2d.; or the 2 vols. in 1, 10s. 6d., post free, 11s. 8d. These volumes contain a mass of information and instruction on the Literature, Chronology, Biography, Topography, Zoology, Geology, Geography, and Botany of the Bible; reconciling the truths of the Sacred Scriptures with all known science, and every discovery to the present time. They contain also simple but interesting instruction on the Bible generally, under the head of "A Mother's Sermons on the Gospels;" "Hard Texts explained," "The Eastern Shepherd and his Flock," &c. &c.

"No Christian family should be without this interpreter of Bible truths."

The Child's Educator; or, Familiar Lessons in Botany, Natural History, Geography, Physiology, Anatomy and Health, Astronomy, Arithmetic, English, French, Electricity, Chemistry, Common Things. Edited by JOHN CASSELL. Illustrated with several hundred Engravings. Cloth, 8s., post free, 9s.; with gilt edges, 9s., post free, 10s. This volume is well suited for Children and Schools. What "The Popular Educator" is to the more advanced Student, this is to the young beginner. It contains admirable lessons in the most interesting form. It will shortly be re-issued in weekly numbers, price 1½d. each.

POPULAR EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

Cassell's English Spelling and Reading Book, with upwards of 150 Engravings on Wood. The Orthographical Portion of this Spelling-Book is arranged upon the "Webster" principle of Pronunciation. The Lessons in Reading are suited to the Capacities of Children, and to their gradual progress in general knowledge, and enlivened by appeals to their senses through the medium of Pictorial Representations. Price 1s., bound in cloth, post free, 1s. 2d.

Cassell's Lessons in English. By J. R. BEARD, D.D. In paper covers, 3s., post free, 3s. 4d.; in cloth boards, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 10d. This Manual is intended for the use of Students desirous of obtaining a thorough acquaintance with the rudiments of the English language. It contains a Practical Grammar, and includes an account of the facts of the language, involving the laws of its construction, and the productions of the language, historically treated; thus comprising its literature. It abounds with interesting and important explanations and illustrations, imparting a thorough knowledge of the language itself, the roots and derivations of English words, as well as those rules by which the language may be spoken and written grammatically.

The English Language in its Elements and Forms, with a History of its Origin and Developments. By Professor WILLIAM C. FOWLER. This work treats in the most interesting style of the Historical Elements of the Language, and describes its various forms, including the Phonetic, Orthographical, Etymological, Logical, Syntactical, Rhetorical, and Poetical, with some intelligible rules for Punctuation. It is comprised in 520 pages, furnishing to the educated as well as to the uneducated a volume of deep interest and permanent utility. Cloth boards, lettered, price 3s. 6d., post free, 4s.

FRENCH.

The following works will enable any careful student rapidly to obtain a complete and correct knowledge of the French language:—

Cassell's Sixpenny Lessons in French, with Rules for Pronunciation, on an entirely Novel and Simple Plan. Reprinted, in a revised form, from the "Working Man's Friend." Price 6d., by post, 7d. A sale of more than 30,000 copies of this work is the best evidence of its intrinsic value.

"No better book can be placed in the hands of the student commencing to acquire a knowledge of this language."

Cassell's Lessons in French, Parts I. and II. By Professor FASQUERLE. These Lessons have not been surpassed by any which have been published. They contain a complete systematic Grammar, including Etymology and Syntax, with copious references to the Idiome, and Examples from the best French Writers, with Parallel Translations, furnishing the means of acquiring a full, accurate, and permanent knowledge of the French language. Price 2s. each, in paper covers, post free 2s. 2d.; or 2s. 6d. in cloth, post free 2s. 8d. Complete in 1 vol. 4s. 6d., post free, 4s. 10d.

Key to Cassell's Lessons in French. Paper covers, 1s., post free, 1s. 1d.; cloth, 1s. 6d., post free 1s. 8d.

Cassell's French Manual. By Professor DE LOLME. Price 8s. neatly bound, post free, 3s. 4d. In this Manual the Grammatical Principles of the Language are clearly laid down, and copiously illustrated by suitable Exercises, and a compendious Vocabulary of Substantives, Adjectives, Verbs, and Particles. The Examples are on sentences used every day, and indispensable to enable the Pupil to speak correctly.

Cassell's French Reader; or, Interesting Narratives in French, for Translation, accompanied by Conversational Exercises; with Grammatical and Idiomatical References to "Cassell's Lessons in French," the Explanation of the most difficult Passages, and a complete Vocabulary. Price 2s. in paper covers, post free, 2s. 2d.; 2s. 6d. neat cloth, post free, 2s. 8d.

London: CASSELL, PETTER, AND GALPIN, Belle Sauvage Yard, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

POPULAR EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

Cassell's French and English Dictionary. Composed from the French Dictionaries of the French Academy, Bescherelle, Landais, &c.; from the English Dictionaries of Ogilvie, Johnson, Webster, &c.; and from the Technological and Scientific Dictionaries of both Languages. By Professors De Lolme and Wallace, and Henry Bridgeman, Esq. In Two Divisions: I. French-English. II. English-French. Price, bound in cloth, 5s. each, post free, 5s. 6d. each; or the two in one vol., strongly bound, 9s. 6d., post free 10s. 4d.

This Dictionary is acknowledged to be the most perfect extant. The Morning Post thus speaks of it:—"The appearance of this volume will be hailed with satisfaction. Its publication will supply a want long felt by all engaged in the labour of education—a thoroughly good and cheap French-English and English-French Dictionary."

GERMAN.

EVERY STUDENT WISHING TO MAKE HIMSELF MASTER OF THE GERMAN LANGUAGE SHOULD POSSESS THE FOLLOWING WORKS:—

Cassell's Lessons in German. Parts I. and II. Price 2s. each, in paper covers, post free, 2s. 2d. each; or 2s. 6d. cloth, post free, 2s. 8d. each. The two Parts bound together, 4s. 6d., post free, 4s. 10d. Containing a Complete View of the Idioms of the German Language, in a Series of Easy, Progressive Lessons, by which the Self-Educating Student may learn to read, to speak, and to write that Language with the greatest facility.

Key to Cassell's Lessons in German. Paper Covers, 1s., post free, 1s. 1d.; cloth, 1s. 6d., post free, 1s. 8d.

Cassell's German Pronunciation: Consisting of Easy Extracts from German Writers. Price 1s., paper covers, post free, 1s. 2d.; or 1s. 6d. cloth, post free, 1s. 8d.

Cassell's German Reader: Containing Choice Selections from the best German Authors, in Prose and Verse, and a complete Vocabulary to the Work; also, Copious References to Cassell's "Lessons in German." Price 2s., paper covers, post free, 2s. 2d.; or 2s. 6d. cloth, post free, 2s. 10d.

Cassell's German Pronouncing Dictionary. In Two Parts:—I. German-English, price, in paper covers, 5s., post free, 5s. 6d.; cloth boards, 5s. 6d.; post free, 6s. II. English-German, price, in paper covers, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 10d.; cloth boards, 4s., post free, 4s. 4d.; or complete in 1 vol., handsomely bound in cloth, 9s.; post free, 9s. 8d. The grand distinctive feature of this Work is indicated in its title. It is a Pronouncing Dictionary; that is to say, it contains the pronunciation, as well as the meanings, of each word. This circumstance adds much to its utility, especially for the numerous class of Self-educating Students who do not enjoy the benefit of oral instruction from a native of Germany. To such persons, and to others also, it is a great advantage to see the correct pronunciation of every word at a glance, without having to stop to think, or being in danger of mistake. While the insertion of the pronunciation constitutes a leading feature in this Dictionary, it has other excellencies, the aim of the Editor having been to make it as practically useful as possible to persons of all classes.

ITALIAN.

Cassell's Lessons in Italian: being an Elementary Grammar of the Language; with numerous Exercises, Italian-English and English-Italian, a compendious Vocabulary, &c. &c. By CHARLES TAISENAU, M.D., of the University of Pavia, and Professor of the German and Italian Languages. Price, in stiff covers, 3s., post free, 3s. 4d.; in cloth boards, 3s. 6d., post free, 3s. 10d.

THE GREATEST ENTERPRISE OF THE AGE.

Shortly will be Published,

CASSELL'S Illustrated FAMILY BIBLE.

To be Published in Weekly Numbers, ONE PENNY each, and in Monthly Parts, 5d. each, or when five numbers, 6d.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY BIBLE will be profusely embellished with the best productions of our Living Artists; representing the principal Events of SCRIPTURE HISTORY, and with more than ONE THOUSAND additional Engravings of the MOUNTAINS, VALLEYS, and PLAINS, the LAKES and RIVERS, the CITIES, TOWNS, and VILLAGES in "the Lands of the Bible"; their PLANTS, ANIMALS, and MINERALS; the MANNERS, CUSTOMS, and ARTS of their People; their RUINS, MONUMENTS, COINS, MEDALS, INSCRIPTIONS, and other remains of ANTIQUITY; — all accurately drawn, and faithfully engraved, expressly to elucidate the SACRED WRITINGS.

The whole will be accompanied by ILLUSTRATIVE NOTES, from the highest and latest authorities, and a series of MARGINAL REFERENCES, very carefully prepared, that the reader may not be embarrassed, as is commonly the case, by merely PARALLEL WORDS, but have a valuable Auxiliary in determining the MEANING AND BEARING of the Passage.

CASSELL'S ILLUSTRATED FAMILY BIBLE will be handsomely printed on GOOD PAPER; and no expense will be spared to render it a work worthy of general acceptance and careful preservation.

JOHN CASSELL enters on this undertaking in the fullest confidence that CHRISTIAN MINISTERS of all DENOMINATIONS, the CONDUCTORS of EDUCATIONAL ESTABLISHMENTS, the SUPERINTENDENTS and TEACHERS of SUNDAY and other SCHOOLS, and all who desire to see a really valuable and yet cheap Bible in every HOUSEHOLD, AT HOME and ABROAD, will heartily welcome and recommend this ILLUSTRATED FAMILY BIBLE.

DU BARRY'S DELICIOUS HEALTH-RESTORING REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD,

Which saves 50 times its cost in other remedies, and restores the faculty of digestion, and nervous and muscular energy to the most enfeebled.

We extract a few out of the many thousand expressions of gratitude from invalids thus cured :

Cure No. 71, of Dyspepsia, from the Right Hon. the Lord Stuart de Decies. "Uromana, Cappoquin, County Waterford. I have derived considerable benefit from Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food, and consider it due to yourselves and the public to authorise the publication of these lines. Stuart de Decies."

Cure No. 49,532. "Fifty years' indescribable agony from dyspepsia, nervousness, asthma, cough, constipation, flatulency, spasms, sickness at the stomach and vomiting, have been removed by Du Barry's excellent Food. Maria Joly, Wortham Ling, near Diss, Norfolk."

Cure No. 53,816, Field Marshall the Duke of Plunkow, of dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness, and liver complaints, which had resisted all baths and medical treatment.

Cure No. 47,121. Miss Elizabeth Jacobs, of Nazing Vicarage, Waltham Cross, Herts, of extreme nervousness, indigestion, gatherings, low spirits, and nervous fancies.

Cure No. 48,314. Miss Elizabeth Yeoman, Gateacre, near Liverpool, of ten years' dyspepsia, and all the horrors of nervous irritability.

Cure No. 31,210. Dr. Shorland, of dropsy and debility.

Cure No. 36,212. Captain Allan, of epileptic fits.

Suitably packed for all climates, and with full instructions. In canisters, 1 lb. 2s. 9d.; 2 lb. 4s. 6d.; 5 lb. 11s.; 12 lb. 22s.; Super-refined quality, 10 lb. 33s. The 10 lb. and 12 lb. Canisters are forwarded carriage free, on receipt of Post office order.

BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, Regent-street, London; Fortnum, Mason, and Co., Purveyors to Her Majesty, 182, Piccadilly; Abbis & Co., 60, Gracechurch-street, 63 and 150, Oxford-street; 330, Strand; and through all Grocers and Chemists in town and Country.

RAREY'S HORSE AND CATTLE IMPROVING FOOD.

Is equally adapted to improve the stamina of ill-conditioned Horses, Cows, Bullocks, Calves, Sheep, and Pigs. It causes no extra expense, as it contains far more and better nourishment than its cost of 1*1/2*d. per feed supplies in corn or hay; hence ensures an actual saving in the keep. But its principal advantages are a great improvement in the digestive functions, the stamina and general condition of horses, enabling them to perform far more labour without getting distressed. It imparts new vigour to sick, debilitated, or old apparently worn out horses, and it puts rapidly the finest flesh on cattle generally, and improves the milk in cows, as it enables them to extract the entire nourishment out of everything they feed on.

RAREY & Co., 77, Regent's Quadrant, Piccadilly, London. Packed in Tins of about 90 feed, 11s.; in Casks of about 450 feed, 50s.; of about 1000 feed, £5, being about 1*1/2*d. per feed. Tins and Casks forwarded on receipt of Post-office Order.

DR. PALLACE'S PILLS AND OINTMENT

Are prepared upon scientific principles without mercury, to prevent the danger and injury resulting from quack preparations; they purify, regulate, and strengthen the system, and cure effectually dyspepsia (bad digestion), bile, flatulency, constipation, liver and stomach complaints, and all internal disorders; and the OINTMENT heals sores, wounds, ulcers, boils, burns, carbuncles, chaps, pimples, diseases of the scalp, &c. Both Pills and Ointment are carefully packed for all climates, at 1s. 1*1/2*d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.; or free by post on receipt of stamps, 1s. 4d., 3s. 1d., or 4s. 10d.

London Agents, HANNAY, 63, Oxford-street; SANGER, 150, Oxford-street, and may be ordered through all Medicine vendors.
